'...Neither do I... How do you construe this, monks: If a person were to gather or burn or do as he likes with the grass, twigs, branches & leaves here in Jeta's Grove, would the thought occur to you, "It's us that this person is gathering, burning or doing with as he likes"?'

'No, sir. Why is that? Because those things are not our self, and do not pertain to our self.'

'Even so, monks, whatever is not yours: Let go of it. Your letting go of it will be for your long-term happiness & benefit. And what is not yours? Form (body) is not yours... Feeling is not yours... Perception... Mental processes... Consciousness is not yours. Let go of it. Your letting go of it will be for your long-term happiness & benefit.'

Sariputta: Friends, there is the monk who, on going to foreign lands, is questioned by learned nobles & priests, lay people & contemplatives. Learned & discriminating people say (to him), "What is your teacher's doctrine? What does he teach?" Thus asked, you should answer, "My teacher teaches the subduing of passion & desire."

"...passion & desire for what?"

"...passion & desire for physical form, feeling, perception, mental processes & consciousness."

"...seeing what danger (or drawback) does your teacher teach the subduing of passion & desire for physical form, feeling, perception, mental processes & consciousness?"

"...when a person is not free from passion, desire, love, thirst, fever & craving for physical form, etc., then from any change & alteration in that physical form, etc., there arise sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief & despair."

"...and seeing what benefit does your teacher teach the subduing of passion & desire for physical form, etc.?"

"...when a person is free from passion, desire, love, thirst, fever & craving for physical form, etc., then from any change & alteration in that physical form, etc., sorrow, lamentation, pain, grief & despair do not arise."

Both formerly & now, Anuradha, it is only stress (suffering) that I describe, and the stopping of stress.

I am not an authority on Zen. In fact, I'm not an authority on anything. But I am somewhat familiar with Taoism and the spirit of Zen, and I have found the document ZEN.TXT to be somewhat inaccurate and/or misleading. What follows are some excerpts and rebuttals. The original quotes are in all caps, my replies are in upper/lower case.

ZEN DOES NOT REPRESENT NIRVANA, NOR THE TAO, BUT REPRESENTS THE MEANS TO BE AT ONE WITH THOSE ENDS. ZEN IS THE METHOD OF TRAVEL, NIRVANA THE DESTINATION.

Zen may be the method of travel, but nirvana is not the destination. Nirvana is a side-effect produced by Zen, and only exists while Zen is being practiced. If nirvana is being at one with the Tao, it must also be a nameless condition... beyond definition. Therefore, believing you have achieved nirvana is deceiving yourself. Ultimately, nirvana cannot be consciously experienced at all.

VALUES, MORALS AND ETHICS DO NOT EXIST OUTSIDE OF OUR CULTURAL-EXISTENTIAL MINDS. THEY DO NOT EXIST IN REALITY AND ARE THEREFORE A FIGMENT OF OUR CULTURALLY AND EXISTENTIALLY INDOCTRINATED IMAGINATIO WE BELIEVE OR THINK VALUES EXIST WHEN IN FACT THEY DO NOT. THIS DESCRIBES THE SCHIZOPHRENIC MIND.

Sentence one: true. Sentence two: false. Values are very much a part of reality. They exist in the reality of our minds. People die for them every day.

If values were not real, we would all experience nirvana and satori without effort. (And it is as "schizophrenic" to believe real things don't exist as it is to believe imaginary things are real.)

The danger of values lies ONLY in believing that they exist anywhere OUTSIDE of your mind. You must own your values before you are free to change them.

SINCE CONFUSION, CONFLICT AND INSANITY ARE THE CONSEQUENCE OF OUR COMMITMENT TO VALUES, MORALS AND ETHICS, AND PEACE EXISTS WHEN THER IS NO CONFUSION, CONFLICT OR INSANITY PRESENT, IT CAN BE CONCLUDED THAT PEACE IS THE CONSEQUENCE OF HAVING NO VALUES, NO MORALS AND N

ETHICS.

Impossible. The author has already decided that he/she values the removal of conflict and suffering from his/her life (and/or the lives of others), and is using Zen to remove them. If one has no values, there is no reason to remove suffering and conflict from their life. Also, satori and nirvana would have no value, so there would be no reason to pursue them.

Peace comes from living your life in harmony with your values, morals and ethics... by studying them in an enlightened way and eliminating those that do not stand the test of reason. To throw away your values is to throw away the baby with the bathwater.

ZEN, AS REPRESENTED BY ENLIGHTENMENT AND SATORI, IS IN DIRECT OPPOSITION OF THE FASCISTIC/DICTATORIAL CONTROL THE SUPER-EGO HAS OVER THE MIND OF THE INDIVIDUAL AND OVER THE CULTURAL PATTERN.

How can someone who has no values define their opposite as fascistic and dictatorial? Do I hear the faint stirrings of hypocrisy here?

ZEN, BY ELIMINATING VALUE, CONSEQUENTLY ELIMINATES DESIRE.

If one pursues Zen, it is because he/she desires it. There is no other reason to pursue Zen. If one lives their life in the illusion that they have no values and desires, it is because this illusion is important to them. There is no such thing as a "desireless" existence.

"Zen"... as described in this text... only serves as a brainwashing function whose ultimate end is to convince someone that they aren't desiring and valuing the things they desire and value.

To achieve peace, one must live in harmony with ones' desires as well as their values and ethics, etc. To pretend that you can or have eliminated them from your life is schizophrenic.

THE MESSAGE IN THE BIBLICAL "BOOK OF GENESIS" AS THE KEY TO INDIVIDUAL AND SOCIAL SALVATION.

IT STATES, "DO AS YOU WILL IN THE GARDEN OF EDEN, BUT DO NOT EAT

FROM THE TREE OF THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOOD AND EVIL." IF WE DO EAT AND THEREBY POSSESS THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOOD AND EVIL, WE WILL CONSEQUEN PSYCHOLOGICALLY SEPARATE OURSELVES FROM EDEN, TO SUFFER AND TO CA SUFFERING TO OTHERS UNTIL WE REALIZE THE ERROR WE HAVE MADE. ONCE REALIZED, WE MUST REFUSE TO PARTAKE OF THE KNOWLEDGE OF GOOD AND EV THE KNOWLEDGE OF WHICH IS THE DIRECT AND ONLY CAUSE OF HUMAN SUFFER AND CONFLICT, THEREBY REALIZING EDEN ONCE AGAIN.

So... we are being told that discriminating between good and evil is an evil thing to do.

Discrimination between "good" and "evil" is not inherently wrong... it is the belief that good and evil can be defined by objective standards (i.e. from somewhere other than our own minds) that leads to a fall from nirvana.

THERE IS BUT ONE PATH. ALL OTHERS LEAD TO FURTHER CONFUSION, CONFLICT AND INSANITY.

The above message, brought to us by an anonymous author, has also been brought to us (in one form or another) by Jim and Tammy Bakker, the Ayatollah Khomeni, Ronald Reagan, Mahatma Ghandi, and hundreds of other prophets and wise men. Will the REAL "One Way" please stand up?

Buddha Dhamma Sangha
Anapanasati
Happiness, Unhappiness and Nibbana

FOREWORD

The Buddha said that the greatest gift is the gift of Dhamma. This small book represents the wish of some of those fortunate enough to have received Dhamma teachings from Venerable Ajahn Sumedho to share them with others.

A certain amount of editing of the talks was felt necessary so as to translate the free form of direct speech into a more ordered printed record. This was always done judiciously and with great respect. The second section, 'Anapanasati', is in fact composed of passages from three or four different talks on the subject of mindfulness of breathing. It seemed very useful to have so much pertinent advice gathered in a single place.

It is by sincerely using the Ajahn's teachings as 'tools to reflect on the way things are' that we can begin to repay our great debt of gratitude to him. May we all constantly do so.

The Sangha, Wat Pah Nanachat

Yesterday is a memory.
Tomorrow is the unknown.
Now is the knowing.

BUDDHA DHAMMA SANGHA

When people ask, 'What do you have to do to become a Buddhist?', we say that we take refuge in Buddha Dhamma Sangha. And to take refuge we recite a formula in the Pali language:

Buddham saranam gacchami
I go to the Buddha for refuge
Dhammam saranam gacchami
I go to the Dhamma for refuge
Sangham saranam gacchami
I go to the Sangha for refuge.

As we practise more and more and begin to realize the profundity of the Buddhist Teachings, it becomes a real joy to take these refuges, and even just their recitation inspires the mind. After twenty-two years as a monk, I still like to chant 'Buddham saranam gacchami' - in fact I like it more than I did twenty-one years ago - because then it didn't really mean anything to me, I just chanted it because I had to, because it was part of the tradition. Merely taking refuge verbally in the Buddha doesn't mean you take refuge in anything: a parrot could be trained to say 'Buddham saranam gacchami', and it would probably be as meaningful to a parrot as it is to many Buddhists. These words are for reflection, looking at them and actually investigating what they mean: what 'refuge' means, what 'Buddha' means. When we say, 'I take refuge in the Buddha,' what do we mean by that? How can we use that so it is not just a repetition of nonsense syllables, but something that really helps to remind us, gives us direction and increases our devotion, our dedication to the path of the Buddha?

The word 'Buddha' is a lovely word - it means 'The one who knows'- and the first refuge is in Buddha as the personification of wisdom. Un-personified wisdom remains too abstract for us: we can't conceive a bodiless, soul-less wisdom, and so as wisdom always seems to have a personal quality to it, using Buddha as its symbol is very useful.

We can use the word Buddha to refer to Gotama, the founder of what is now known as Buddhism, the historical sage who attained Parinibbana1 in India 2,500 years ago, the teacher of the Four Noble Truths and the Eightfold Path, teachings from which we still benefit today. But when we take refuge in the Buddha, it doesn't mean that we take refuge in some historical prophet, but in that which is wise in the universe, in our minds, that which is not separate from us but is more real than anything we can conceive with the mind or experience through the senses. Without any Buddha-wisdom in the universe, life for any length of time would be totally impossible; it is the Buddha-wisdom that protects. We call it Buddha-wisdom, other people can call it other things if they want, these are just words. We happen to use the words of our tradition. We're not going to argue about Pali words, Sanskrit words, Hebrew, Greek, Latin, English or any other, we're just using the term Buddha-wisdom as a conventional symbol to help remind us to be wise, to be alert, to be awake.

Many forest bhikkhus in the North-East of Thailand use the word 'Buddho' as their meditation object. They use it as a kind of koan. Firstly, they calm the mind by following the inhalations and exhalations using the syllables BUD-DHO, and then begin to contemplate,

'What is Buddho, the 'one who knows'?' 'What is the knowing?'
When I used to travel around the North-East of Thailand on tudong I liked to go and stay at the monastery of Ajahn Fun. Ajahn Fun was a much-loved and deeply respected monk, the teacher of the Royal Family, and he was so popular that he was constantly receiving guests. I would sit at his kuti [hut] and hear him give the most amazing kind of Dhamma talks, all on the subject of 'Buddho'- as far as I could see, it was all that he taught. He could make it into a really profound meditation, whether for an illiterate farmer or an elegant, western-educated Thai aristocrat. The main part of his teaching was to not just mechanically repeat 'Buddho', but to reflect and investigate, to awaken the mind to really look into the 'Buddho', 'the one who knows' really investigate its beginning, its end, above and below, so that one's whole attention was stuck onto it. When one did that, 'Buddho' became something that echoed through the mind. One would investigate it, look at it, examine it before it was said and after it was said, and eventually one would start listening to it and hear beyond the sound, until one heard the silence.

A refuge is a place of safety, and so when superstitious people would come to my teacher Ajahn Chah, wanting charmed medallions or little talismans to protect them from bullets and knives, ghosts and so on, he would say, 'Why do you want things like that? The only real protection is taking refuge in the Buddha. Taking refuge in the Buddha is enough.' But their faith in Buddha usually wasn't quite as much as their faith in those silly little medallions. They wanted something made out of bronze and clay, stamped and blessed. This is what is called taking refuge in bronze and clay, taking refuge in superstition, taking refuge in that which is truly unsafe and cannot really help us.

Today in modern Britain we find that generally people are more sophisticated. They don't take refuge in magic charms, they take refuge in things like the Westminster Bank - but that is still taking refuge in something that offers no safety. Taking refuge in the Buddha, in wisdom, means that we have a place of safety. When there is wisdom, when we act wisely and live wisely, we are truly safe. The conditions around us might change. We can't guarantee what will happen to the material standard of living, or that the Westminster Bank will survive the decade. The future remains unknown and mysterious, but in the present, by taking refuge in the Buddha we have that presence of mind now to reflect on and learn from life as we live it.

Wisdom doesn't mean having a lot of knowledge about the world; we don't have to go to university and collect information about the world to be wise. Wisdom means knowing the nature of conditions as we're experiencing them. It is not just being caught up in reacting to and absorbing into the conditions of our bodies and minds out of habit, out of fear, worry, doubt, greed and so on, but it is using that 'Buddho', that 'one who knows,' to observe that these conditions are changing. It is the knowing of that change that we call Buddha and in which we take refuge. We make no claims to Buddha as being 'me' or 'mine'. We don't say, 'I am Buddha,' but rather, 'I take refuge in Buddha.' It is a way of humbly submitting to that wisdom, being aware, being awake.

Although in one sense taking refuge is something we are doing all the time, the Pali formula we use is a reminder - because we forget, because we habitually take refuge in worry, doubt, fear, anger, greed and so on. The Buddha-image is similar; when we bow to it we don't imagine that it is anything other than a bronze image, a symbol. It is a reflection and makes us a little more aware of Buddha, of our refuge in Buddha Dhamma Sangha. The Buddha image sits in great dignity and calm, not in a trance but fully alert, with a look of wakefulness and kindness, not being caught in the changing conditions around it. Though the image is made of brass and we have these flesh-and-blood bodies and it is much more difficult for us, still it is a reminder. Some people get very puritanical about Buddha-images, but here in the West I haven't found them to be a danger. The real idols that we believe in and worship and that constantly delude us are our thoughts, views and opinions, our loves and hates, our self-conceit and pride.

The second refuge is in the Dhamma, in ultimate truth or ultimate reality. Dhamma is impersonal; we don't in any way try to personify it to make it any kind of personal deity. When we chant in Pali the verse on Dhamma, we say it is 'sanditthiko akaliko ehipassiko opanayiko paccattam veditabbo vi¤¤uhi'. As Dhamma has no personal attributes, we can't even say it is good or bad or anything that has any superlative or comparative quality; it is beyond the dualistic conceptions of mind.

So when we describe Dhamma or give an impression of it, we do it through words such as 'sanditthiko', which means immanent, here-and-now. That brings us back into the present; we feel a sense of immediacy, of now. You may think that Dhamma is some kind of thing that is 'out there', something you have to find elsewhere, but sanditthikodhamma means that it is immanent, here-and-now.

Akalikadhamma means that Dhamma is not bound by any time condition. The word akala means timeless. Our conceptual mind can't conceive of anything that is timeless, because our conceptions and perceptions are time-based conditions, but what we can say is that Dhamma is akala, not bound by time.

Ehipassikadhamma means to come and see, to turn towards or go to the Dhamma. It means to look, to be aware. It is not that we pray to the Dhamma to come, or wait for it to tap us on the shoulder; we have to put forth effort. It is like Christ's saying, 'Knock on the door and it shall be opened.' Ehipassiko means that we have to put forward that effort, to turn towards that truth.

Opanayiko means leading inwards, towards the peace within the mind. Dhamma doesn't take us into fascination, into excitement, romance and adventure, but leads to Nibbana, to calm, to silence.

Paccattam veditabbo vi¤¤uhi means that we can only know Dhamma through direct experience. It is like the taste of honey - if someone else tastes it, we still don't know its flavour. We may know the chemical formula or be able to recite all the great poetry ever written about honey, but only when we taste it for ourselves do we really know what it is like. It is the same with Dhamma: we have to taste it, we have to know it directly.

Taking refuge in Dhamma is taking another safe refuge. It is not taking refuge in philosophy or intellectual concepts, in theories, in ideas, in doctrines or beliefs of any sort. It is not taking refuge in a belief in Dhamma, or a belief in God or in some kind of force in outer space or something beyond or something separate, something that we have to find sometime later. The descriptions of the Dhamma keep us in the present, in the here-and-now, unbound by time. Taking refuge is an immediate immanent reflection in the mind, it is not just repeating 'Dhammam Saranam gacchami' like a parrot, thinking, 'Buddhists say this so I have to say it.' We turn towards the Dhamma, we are aware now, take refuge in Dhamma, now as an immediate action, an immediate reflection of being the Dhamma, being that very truth.

Because our conceiving mind tends always to delude us, it takes us into becoming. We think, 'I'll practise meditation so that I'll become enlightened in the future. I will take the Three Refuges in order to become a Buddhist. I want to become wise. I want to get away from suffering and ignorance and become something else.' This is the conceiving mind, the desire mind, the mind that always deludes us. Rather than constantly thinking in terms of becoming something, we take refuge in being Dhamma in the present.

The impersonality of Dhamma bothers many people, because devotional religion tends to personify everything and people coming from such traditions don't feel right if they can't have some sort of personal relationship with it. I remember one time, a French Catholic missionary came to stay in our monastery and practise meditation. He felt at something of a loss with Buddhism because he said it was like 'cold surgery', there was no personal relationship with God. One cannot have a personal relationship with Dhamma, one cannot say 'Love the Dhamma!' or 'The Dhamma loves me!'; there is no need for that. We only need a personal relationship with something we are not, like our mother, father, husband or wife, something separate from us.

We don't need to take refuge in mother or father again, someone to protect us and love us and say, 'I love you no matter what you do. Everything is going to be all right,' and pat us on the head. The Buddha-Dhamma is a very maturing refuge, it is a religious practice that is a complete sanity or maturity, in which we are no longer seeking a mother or father, because we don't need to become any' thing any more. We don't need to be loved or protected by anyone any more, because we can love and protect others, and that is all that is important. We no longer have to ask or demand things from others, whether it is from other people or even some deity or force that we feel is separate from us and has to be prayed to and asked for guidance.

We give up all our attempts to conceive Dhamma as being this or that or anything at all, and let go of our desire to have a personal relationship with the truth. We have to be that truth, here and now. Being that truth, taking that refuge, calls for an immediate awakening, for being wise now, being Buddha, being Dhamma in the present.

The Third refuge is Sangha, which means a group. 'Sangha' may be the Bhikkhu-Sangha [the order of monks] - or the Ariya-Sangha, the group of the Noble Beings, all those who live virtuously, doing good and refraining from evil with bodily action and speech. Here, taking refuge in the Sangha with 'Sangham saranam gacchami' means we take refuge in virtue, in that which is good, virtuous, kind, compassionate and generous. We don't take refuge in those things in our minds that are mean, nasty, cruel, selfish, jealous, hateful, angry - even though admittedly that is what we often tend to do out of heedlessness, out of not reflecting, not being awake, but just reacting to conditions. Taking refuge in the Sangha means, on the conventional level, doing good and refraining from evil with bodily action and speech.

All of us have both good thoughts and intentions and bad ones. Sankharas [conditioned phenomena] are that way, some are good and some aren't, some are indifferent, some are wonderful and some are nasty. Conditions in the world are changing conditions. We can't just think the best, the most refined thoughts and feel only the best and the kindest feelings; both good and bad thoughts and feelings come and go, but we take refuge in virtue rather than in hatred. We take refuge in that in all of us that intends to do good, which is compassionate and kind and loving towards ourselves and others.

So the refuge of Sangha is a very practical refuge for day-to-day living within the human form, within this body, in relation to the bodies of other beings and the physical world that we live in. When we take this refuge we do not act in any way that causes division, disharmony, cruelty, meanness or unkindness to any living being, including ourself, our own body and mind. This is being 'supatipanno', one who practises well.

When we are aware and mindful, when we reflect and observe, we begin to see that acting on impulses that are cruel and selfish only brings harm and misery to ourself as well as to others. It doesn't take any great powers of observation to see that. If you've met any criminals in your life, people who have acted selfishly and evilly, you'll find them constantly frightened, obsessed, paranoid, suspicious, having to drink a lot, take drugs, keep busy, do all kinds of things, because living with themselves is so horrible. Five minutes alone with themselves without any dope or drink or anything would seem to them like eternal hell, because the kammic(2) result of evil is so appalling, mentally. Even if they're never caught by the police or sent to prison, don't think they're going to get away with anything. In fact sometimes that is the kindest thing, to put them in prison and punish them; it makes them feel better. I was never a criminal, but I have managed to tell a few lies and do a few mean and nasty things in my lifetime, and the results were always unpleasant. Even today when I think of those things, it is not a pleasant memory, it is not something that I want to go to announce to everybody, not something that I feel joy when I think about.

When we are meditating we realize that we have to be completely responsible for how we live. In no way can we blame anyone else for anything at all. Before I started to meditate I used to blame people and society: 'If only my parents had been completely wise, enlightened arahants, I would be all right. If only the United Sates of America had a truly wise, compassionate government that never made any mistakes, supported me completely and appreciated me fully. If only my friends were wise and encouraging and the teachers truly wise, generous and kind. If everyone around me was perfect, if the society was perfect, if the world was wise and perfect, then I wouldn't have any of these problems. But all have failed me.'

My parents had a few flaws and they did make a few mistakes, but now when I look back on it they didn't make very many. At the time when I was look-ing to blame others and I was desperately trying to think of the faults of my parents, I really had to work at it. My generation was very good at blaming everything on the United States, and that is a really easy one because the United States makes a lot of mistakes.

But when we meditate it means we can no longer get away with that kind of lying to ourselves. We suddenly realize that no matter what anyone else has done, or how unjust the society might be or what our parents might have been like, we can in no way spend the rest of our lives blaming anyone else - that is a complete waste of time. We have to accept complete responsibility for our life, and live it. Even if we did have miserable parents, were raised in a terrible society with no opportunities, it still doesn't matter. There is no one else to blame for our suffering now but ourselves, our own ignorance, selfishness and conceit.

In the crucifixion of Jesus we can see a brilliant example of a man in pain, stripped naked, made fun of, completely humiliated and then publicly executed in the most horrible, excruciating way, yet without blaming anyone: 'Forgive them, Lord, they know not what they do.' This is a sign of wisdom - it means that even if people are crucifying us, nailing us to the cross, scourging us, humiliating us in every way, it is our aversion, self-pity, pettiness and selfishness that is the problem, the suffering. It is not even the physical pain that is the suffering, it is the aversion. Now if Jesus Christ had said, 'Curse you for treating me like this!', he would have been just another criminal and would have been forgotten a few days later.

Reflect on this, because we tend to easily blame others for our suffering, and we can justify it because maybe other people are mistreating us or exploiting us or don't understand us or are doing dreadful things to us. We're not denying that, but we make nothing of it any more. We forgive, we let go of those memories, because taking refuge in Sangha means, here and now, doing good and refraining from doing evil with bodily action and speech.

So may you reflect on this and really see Buddha Dhamma Sangha as a refuge. Look on them as opportunities for reflection and consideration.

It is not a matter of believing in Buddha Dhamma Sangha - not a faith in concepts - but a using of symbols for mindfulness, for awakening the mind here-and-now, being here-and-now.

ANAPANASATI

We tend to overlook the ordinary. We are usually only aware of our breath when it's abnormal, like if we have asthma or when we've been running hard. But with anapanasati 3 we take our ordinary breath as the meditation object. We don't try to make the breath long or short, or control it in any way, but to simply stay with the normal inhalation and exhalation. The breath is not something that we create or imagine; it is a natural process of our bodies that continues as long as life lasts, whether we concentrate on it or not. So it is an object that is always present; we can turn to it at any time. We don't have to have any qualifications to watch our breath. We do not even need to be particularly intelligent - all we have to do is to be content with, and aware of, one inhalation and exhalation. Wisdom does not come from studying great theories and philosophies, but from observing the ordinary.

The breath lacks any exciting quality or any-thing fascinating about it, and so we can become very restless and averse to it. Our desire is always to 'get' something, to find something that will interest and absorb us without any effort on our part. If we hear some music, we don't think, 'I must concentrate on this fascinating and exciting rhythmic music' we can't stop ourselves, because the rhythm is so compelling that it pulls us in. The rhythm of our normal breathing is not interesting or compelling, it is tranquillizing, and most beings aren't used to tranquillity. Most people like the idea of peace, but find the actual experience of it disappointing or frustrating. They desire stimulation, something that will draw them into itself. With anapanasati we stay with an object that is quite neutral - we don't have any strong feelings of like or dislike for our breath - and just note the beginning of an inhalation, its middle and its end, then the beginning of an exhalation, its middle and end. The gentle rhythm of the breath, being slower than the rhythm of thought, takes us to tranquillity; we begin to stop thinking. But we don't try to get anything from the meditation, to get samadhi or get jhana4, because when the mind is trying to achieve or attain things, rather than just being humbly content with one breath, then it doesn't slow down and become calm, and we become frustrated.

At first the mind wanders off. Once we are aware that we have wandered off the breath, then we very gently return to it. We use the attitude of being very, very patient and always willing to begin again. Our minds are not used to being held down, they have been taught to associate one thing with another and form opinions about everything. Being accustomed to using our intelligence and ability to think in clever ways, we tend to become very tense and restless when we can't do that, and when we practise anapanasati we feel resistance, a resentment to it. It is like a wild horse when it is first harnessed, getting angry with the things that bind it.

When the mind wanders we get upset and discouraged, negative and averse to the whole thing. If out of frustration, we try to force the mind to be tranquil with sheer will, we can only keep it up for a short while and then the mind is off somewhere else. So the right attitude to anapanasati is being very patient, having all the time in the world, letting go or discarding all worldly, personal or financial problems. During this time there is nothing we have to do except watch our breath.

If the mind wanders on the in-breath, then put more effort into the inhalation. If the mind wanders on the exhalation, then put more effort into that. Keep bringing it back. Always be willing to start anew. At the start of each new day, at the beginning of each inhalation, cultivate the beginner's mind, carrying nothing from the old to the new, leaving no traces, like a big bonfire.

One inhalation and the mind wanders, so we bring it back again - and that itself is a moment of mindfulness. We are training the mind like a good mother trains her child. A little child doesn't know what it is doing, it just wanders off; and if the mother gets angry with it and spanks and beats it, the child becomes terrified and neurotic. A good mother will just leave the child, keeping an eye on it, and if it wanders she will bring it back. Having that kind of patience, we're not trying to bash away at ourselves, hating ourselves, hating our breath, hating everybody, getting upset because we can't get tranquil with anapanasati.

Sometimes we get too serious about everything, totally lacking in joy and happiness, with no sense of humour, just repressing everything. Gladden the mind, put a smile on your dial! Be relaxed and at ease, without the pressure of having to achieve anything special - nothing to attain, no big deal, nothing special. And what can you say you have done today to earn your board and keep? Just one mindful inhalation? Crazy! But that is more than most people can say of their day. We're not battling the forces of evil. If you feel averse towards anapanasati, then note that too. Don't feel it's something you have to do, but let it be a pleasure, something you really enjoy doing. When you think, 'I can't do it,, then recognize that as resistance, fear or frustration and then relax. Don't make this practice into a difficult thing, a burdensome task.

When I was first ordained I was dead serious, very grim and solemn about myself, like a dried-up old stick, and I used to get in terrible states thinking, 'I've got to... I've got to....' At those times I learned to contemplate peace. Doubts and restlessness, discontent and aversion - soon I was able to reflect on peace, saying the word over and over, hypnotizing myself to relax. The self-doubts would start coming - 'I'm getting nowhere with this, it's useless, I want to get something' - and I was able to be peaceful with that. This is one method that you can use. So when we're tense, we relax and then we resume anapanasati.

At first we feel hopelessly clumsy - like when we're learning to play the guitar. When we first start playing, our fingers are so clumsy it seems hopeless, but when we've done it for some time we gain skill and it is quite easy. We're learning to witness what's going on in our mind, so we can know when we're getting restless and tense, or when we're getting dull. We recognize that: we're not trying to convince ourselves that it's otherwise, we're fully aware of the way things are.

We sustain effort for one inhalation. If we can't do that, then we sustain it for half an inhalation at least. In this way we're not trying to become perfect all at once. We don't have to do everything just right according to some idea of how it should be, but we work with the problems that are there. If we have a scattered mind, then it's wisdom to recognize the mind that goes all over the place - that is insight. To think that we shouldn't be that way, to hate ourselves or feel discouraged because that is the way we happen to be - that is ignorance.

We don't start from where a perfect yogi is, we're not doing Iyengar(5) postures before we can bend over and touch our toes. That is the way to ruin ourselves. We may look at all the postures in the Light on Yoga book and see Iyengar wrapping his legs around his neck, in all kinds of amazing postures, but if we try to do them ourselves they'll cart us off to hospital. So we start from just trying to bend a little more from the waist, examine the pain and resistance to it, learn to stretch gradually. The same with anapanasati: we recognize the way it is now and start from there, we sustain our attention a little longer, and we begin to understand what concentration is. Don't make Superman resolutions when you're not Superman. You say, 'I'm going to sit and watch my breath all night,' and then when you fail you become angry. Set periods that you know you can do. Experiment, work with the mind until you know how to put forth effort and how to relax.

We have to learn to walk by falling down. Look at babies: I've never seen one that could walk straight away. Babies learn to walk by crawling, by holding onto things, by falling down and then pulling themselves up again. It is the same with meditation. We learn wisdom by observing ignorance, by making a mistake, reflecting and keeping going. If we think about it too much it seems hopeless. If babies thought a lot they'd never learn to walk, because when you watch a child trying to walk it seems hopeless, doesn't it? When we think about it, meditation can seem completely hopeless, but we just keep doing it. It is easy when we're full of enthusiasm, really inspired with the teacher and the teaching - but enthusiasm and inspiration are impermanent conditions, they take us to disillusionment and boredom.

When we're bored, we really have to put effort into the practice. When we're bored, we want to turn away and be reborn into something fascinating and exciting. But for insight and wisdom, we have to patiently endure through the troughs of disillusion-ment and depression. It is only in this way that we can stop reinforcing the cycles of habit, and come to understand cessation, come to know the silence and emptiness of the mind.

If we read books about not putting any effort into things, just letting everything happen in a natural, spontaneous way, then we tend to start thinking that all we have to do is lounge about - and then we lapse into a dull passive state. In my own practice, when I lapsed into dull states I came to see the importance of putting effort into physical posture. I saw that there was no point in making effort in a merely passive way. I would pull the body up straight, push out the chest and put energy into the sitting posture; or else I would do head stands or shoulder stands. Even though in the early days I didn't have a tremendous amount of energy, I still managed to do something requiring effort. I would learn to sustain it for a few seconds and then I would lose it again, but that was better than doing nothing at all.

The more we take the easy way, the path of least resistance - the more we just follow our desires, the more the mind becomes sloppy, heedless and confused. It is easy to think, easier to sit and think all the time than not to think - it is a habit we've acquired. Even the thought, 'I shouldn't think,' is just another thought. To avoid thought we have to be mindful of it, to put forth effort by watching and listening, by being attentive to the flow in our minds. Rather than thinking about our mind, we watch it. Rather than just getting caught in thoughts, we keep recognizing them. Thought is movement, it is energy, it comes and goes, it is not a permanent condition of the mind. Without evaluating or analysing, when we simply recognize thought as thought, it begins to slow down and stop. This isn't annihilation, this is allowing things to cease. It is compassion. As the habitual obsessive thinking begins to fade, great spaces we never knew were there begin to appear.

We are slowing everything down by absorbing into the natural breath, calming the kammic formations, and this is what we mean by samatha or tranquillity: coming to a point of calm. The mind becomes malleable, supple and flexible, and the breathing can become very fine. But we only carry the samatha practice to the point of upacara samadhi [approaching concentration], we don't try to completely absorb into the object and enter jhana. At this point we are still aware of both the object and its periphery. The extreme kinds of mental agitation have diminished considerably, but we can still operate using wisdom.

With our wisdom faculty still functioning, we investigate, and this is vipassana - looking into and seeing the nature of whatever we experience: its impermanence, unsatisfactoriness and imperson-ality. Anicca, dukkha and anatta6 are not concepts we believe in, but things we can observe. We investigate the beginning of an inhalation and its ending. We observe what a beginning is, not thinking about what it is, but observing, aware with bare attention at the beginning of an inhalation and its end. The body breathes all on its own: the in-breath conditions the out-breath and the out-breath conditions the in-breath, we can't control anything. Breathing belongs to nature, it doesn't belong to us - it is not-self. When we see this we are doing vipassana.

The sort of knowledge we gain from Buddhist meditation is humbling - Ajahn Chah calls it the earth-worm knowledge - it doesn't make you arrogant, it doesn't puff you up, it doesn't make you feel that you are anything, or that you have attained anything. In worldly terms, this practice doesn't seem very important or necessary. Nobody is ever going to write a newspaper headline: 'At eight o'clock this evening Venerable Sumedho had an inhalation!, To some people, thinking about how to solve all the world's problems might seem very important, how to help all the people in the Third World, how to set the world right. Compared with these things, watching our breath seems insignificant, and most people think, 'Why waste time doing that?' People have confronted me about this, saying: 'What are you monks doing sitting there? What are you doing to help humanity? You're just selfish, you expect people to give you food while you just sit there and watch your breath. You're running away from the real world.'

But what is the real world? Who is really running away, and from what? What is there to face? We find that what people call the 'real world' is the world they believe in, the world that they are committed to or the world that they know and are familiar with. But that world is a condition of mind. Meditation is actually confronting the real world, recognizing and acknowledging it as it really is, rather than believing in it or justifying it or trying to mentally annihilate it.

Now the real world operates on the same pattern of arising and passing as the breath. We're not theorizing about the nature of things, taking philosophical ideas from others and trying to rationalize with them, but by watching our breath we're actually observing the way nature is. When we're watching our breath we're actually watching nature; through understanding the nature of the breath, we can understand the nature of all conditioned phenomena. If we tried to understand all conditioned phenomena in their infinite variety, quality, different time span and so on, it would be too complex, our minds wouldn't be able to handle it. We have to learn from simplicity.

So with a tranquil mind we become aware of the cyclical pattern, we see that all that arises passes away. That cycle is what is called samsara, the wheel of birth and death. We observe the samsaric cycle of the breath. We inhale and then we exhale: we can't have only inhalations or only exhalations, the one conditions the other. It would be absurd to think: 'I only want to inhale. I don't want to exhale. I'm giving up exhalation. My life will be just one constant inhalation' - that would be absolutely ridiculous. If I said that to you, you'd think I was crazy; but that is what most people do.

How foolish people are when they want only to attach to excitement, pleasure, youth, beauty and vigour. 'I only want beautiful things and I'm not going to have anything to do with the ugly. I want pleasure and delight and creativity but I don't want any boredom or depression.' It is the same kind of madness as if you were to hear me saying, 'I can't stand inhalations. I'm not going to have them any more.' When we observe that attachment to beauty, sensual pleasures and love will always lead to despair, then our attitude is one of detachment. That doesn't mean annihilation or any desire to destroy, but simply letting go, non-attachment. We don't seek perfection in any part of the cycle, but see that perfection lies in the whole cycle: it includes old age, sickness and death. What arises in the uncreated reaches its peak and then returns to the uncreated, and that is perfection.

As we start to see that all sankharas have this pattern of arising and passing away, we begin to go inwards to the unconditioned, the peace of the mind, its silence. We begin to experience su¤¤ata or emptiness, which is not oblivion or nothingness, but is a clear and vibrant stillness. We can actually turn to the emptiness rather than to the conditions of the breath and mind. Then we have a perspective on the conditions and don't just blindly react to them any more.

There is the conditioned, the unconditioned and the knowing. What is the knowing? Is it memory? Is it consciousness? Is it 'me'? I've never been able to find out, but I can be aware. In Buddhist meditation we stay with the knowing: being aware, being awake, being Buddha in the present, knowing that whatever arises passes away and is not-self.

We apply this knowing to everything, both the conditioned and the unconditioned. It is transcending - being awake rather than trying to escape - and it is all in the ordinary. We have the four normal postures of sitting, standing, walking and lying down - we don't have to stand on our heads or do back-flips or anything. We use four normal postures and the ordinary breathing, because we are moving towards that which is most ordinary, the unconditioned. Conditions are extraordinary, but the peace of the mind, the unconditioned, is so ordinary that nobody ever notices it. It is there all the time, but we don't ever notice it because we're attached to the mysterious and the fascinating. We get caught up in the things that arise and pass away, the things that stimulate and depress. We get caught up in the way things seem to be - and forget. But now we're going back to that source in meditation, to the peace, in that position of knowing. Then the world is understood for what it is, and we are no longer deluded by it.

The realization of samsara is the condition of Nibbana. As we recognize the cycles of habit and are no longer deluded by them or their qualities, we realize Nibbana. The Buddha-knowing is of just two things: the conditioned and the unconditioned. It is an immediate recognition of how things are right now, without grasping or attachment. At this moment we can be aware of the conditions of the mind, feelings in the body, what we're seeing, hearing, tasting, touching, smelling and thinking, and also of the emptiness of the mind. The conditioned and the unconditioned are what we can realize.

So the Buddha's teaching is a very direct teaching. Our practice is not 'to become enlightened', but to be in the knowing, now.

HAPPINESS, UNHAPPINESS AND NIBBANA

The goal of buddhist meditation is Nibbana. We incline towards the peace of Nibbana and away from the complexities of the sensual realm, the endless cycles of habit. Nibbana is a goal that can be realized in this lifetime. We don't have to wait until we die to know if it's real.

The senses and the sensual world are the realm of birth and death. Take sight for instance: it's dependent on so many factors - whether it's day or night, whether or not the eyes are healthy, and so on. Yet we become very attached to the colours, shapes and forms that we perceive with the eyes, and we identify with them. Then there are the ears and sound: when we hear pleasant sounds we seek to hold onto them, and when we hear unpleasant sounds we try to turn away. With smells: we seek the pleasure of fragrances and pleasant odours, and try to get away from unpleasant ones. Also with flavours: we seek delicious tastes and try to avoid bad ones. And with touch: just how much of our lives is spent trying to escape from physical discomfort and pain, and seeking the delight of physical sensation? Finally there is thought, the discriminative consciousness. It can give us a lot of pleasure or a lot of misery.

These are the senses, the sensual world. It is the compounded world of birth and death. Its very nature is dukkha, it is imperfect and unsatisfying. You'll never find perfect happiness, contentment or peace in the sensual world; it will always bring despair and death. The sensual world is unsatisfactory, and so we only suffer from it when we expect it to satisfy us.

We suffer from the sensual world when we expect more from it than it can possibly give: things like permanent security and happiness, permanent love and safety, hoping that our life will only be one of pleasure and have no pain in it. 'If we could only get rid of sickness and disease and conquer old age.' I remember 20 years ago in the States people had this great hope that modem science would be able to get rid of all illnesses. They'd say, 'All mental illnesses are due to chemical imbalances. If we can just find the right chemical combinations and inject them into the body, schizophrenia will disappear.' There would be no more headaches or backaches. We would gradually replace all our internal organs with nice plastic ones. I even read an article in an Australian medical journal about how they hoped to conquer old age! As the world's population keeps increasing we'd keep having more children and nobody would ever get old and die. Just think what a mess that would be!

The sensual world is unsatisfactory and that's the way it's supposed to be. When we attach to it, it takes us to despair - because attachment means that we want it to be satisfactory, we want it to satisfy us, to make us content, happy and secure. But just notice the nature of happiness how long can you stay happy? What is happiness? You may think it's how you feel when you get what you want. Someone says something you like to hear, and you feel happy. Someone does something you approve of, and you feel happy. The sun shines and you feel happy. Someone makes nice food and serves it to you, and you're happy. But how long can you stay happy? Do we always have to depend on the sun shining? In England, the weather is very changeable: the happiness about the sun shining in England is obviously very impermanent and unsatisfactory.

Unhappiness is not getting what we want: wanting it to be sunny when it's cold, wet and rainy; people doing things that we don't approve of; having food that isn't delicious and so on. Life gets boring and tedious when we're unhappy with it. So happiness and unhappiness are very dependent on getting what we want, and having to get what we don't want.

But happiness is the goal of most people's lives; in the American constitution, I think, they speak of 'the right to the pursuit of happiness'. Get-ting what we want, what we think we deserve, be-comes our goal in life. But happiness always leads to unhappiness, because it's impermanent. How long can you really be happy? Trying to arrange, control and manipulate conditions so as to always get what we want, always hear what we want to hear, always see what we want to see, so that we never have to experience unhappiness or despair, is a hopeless task. It's impossible, isn't it? Happiness is unsatisfactory, it's dukkha. It's not something to depend on or make the goal of life. Happiness will always be disappointing because it lasts so briefly and then is succeeded by unhappiness. It is always dependent on so many other things. We feel happy when we're healthy but our human bodies are subject to rapid changes and we can lose that health very quickly. Then we feel terribly unhappy at being sick, at losing the pleasure of feeling energetic and vigorous.

Thus the goal for the Buddhist is not happiness, because we realize that happiness is unsatisfactory. The goal lies away from the sensual world. It is not rejection of the sensual world, but understanding it so well that we no longer seek it as an end in itself. We no longer expect the sensory world to satisfy us. We no longer demand that sensory consciousness be anything other than an existing condition that we can skilfully use according to time and place. We no longer attach to it, or demand that the sense impingement be always pleasant, or feel despair and sorrow when it's unpleasant. Nibbana isn't a state of blankness, a trance where you're totally wiped out. It's not nothingness or an annihilation: it's like a space. It's going into the space of your mind where you no longer attach, where you're no longer deluded by the appearance of things. You are no longer demanding anything from the sensory world. You are just recognizing it as it arises and passes away.

Being born in the human condition means that we must inevitably experience old age, sickness and death. One time a young woman came to our mona-stery in England with her baby. The baby had been badly ill for about a week with a horrible racking cough. The mother looked totally depressed and miserable. As she sat there in the reception room holding the baby, it fumed red in the face and start-ed screaming and coughing horribly. The woman said, 'Oh, Venerable Sumedho, why does he have to suffer like this? He's never hurt anybody, he's never done anything wrong. Why? In some previous life, what did he do to have to suffer like this?'

He was suffering because he was born! If he hadn't been born, he wouldn't have to suffer. When we're born we have to expect these things. Having a human body means that we have to experience sickness, pain, old age and death. This is an important reflection. We can speculate that maybe in a previous life he liked to choke cats and dogs or something like that, and he has to pay for it in this life, but that's mere speculation and it doesn't really help. What we can know is that it's the kammic result of being born. Each one of us must inevitably experience sickness and pain, hunger, thirst, the ageing process of our bodies and death it's the law of kamma. What begins must end, what is born must die, what comes together must separate.

We're not being pessimistic about the way things are, but we're observing, so we don't expect life to be other than it is. Then we can cope with life and endure it when it's difficult, and delight when it's delightful. If we understand it, we can enjoy life without being its helpless victims. How much mis-ery there is in human existence because we expect life to be other than what it is! We have these romantic ideas that we'll meet the right person, fall in love and live happily ever after, that we'll never fight, have a wonderful relationship. But what about death! ? So you think, 'Well, maybe we'll die at the same time.' That's hope, isn't it? There's hope, and then despair when your loved one dies before you do, or runs away with the dustman or the travelling salesman.

You can learn a lot from small children, because they don't disguise their feelings, they just express what they feel in the moment; when they're miserable they start crying, and when they're happy they laugh. Some time ago I went to a layman's home. When we arrived, his young daughter was very happy to see him. Then he said to her, 'I have to take Venerable Sumedho to Sussex University to give a talk.' As we walked out of the door, the little girl fumed red in the face and began screaming in anguish, so that her father said, 'It's all right, I'll be back in an hour., But she wasn't developed to that level where she could understand 'I'll be back in an hour.' The immediacy of separation from the loved was immediate anguish.

Notice how often in our life there is that sorrow at having to separate from something we like or someone we love, from having to leave a place we really like to be in. When you are really mindful you can see the not-wanting to separate, the sorrow. As adults, we can let go of it immediately if we know we can come back again, but it's still there. From last November to March, I travelled around the world, always arriving at airports with somebody meeting me with a 'Hello!' - and then a few days later it was 'Goodbye!' And there was always this sense of 'Come back', and I'd say 'Yes, I'll come back'... and so I've committed myself to do the same thing next year. We can't say, 'Goodbye forever' to someone we like, can we? We say, 'I'll see you again,' 'I'll phone you up,' 'I'll write you a letters or 'until next time we meet'. We have all these phrases to cover over the sense of sorrow and separation.

In meditation we're noting, just observing what sorrow really is. We're not saying that we shouldn't feel sorrow when we separate from someone we love; it's natural to feel that way, isn't it? But now, as meditators, we're beginning to witness sorrow so that we understand it, rather than trying to suppress it, pretend it's something more than it is, or just neglect it.

In England people tend to suppress sorrow when somebody dies. They try not to cry or be emotional, they don't want to make a scene, they 'keep a stiff upper lip'. Then when they start meditating they can find themselves suddenly crying over the death of someone who died fifteen years before. They didn't cry at the time, so they end up doing it fifteen years later. When someone dies, we don't want to admit the sorrow or make a scene because we think that if we cry we're weak, or it's embarrassing to others. So we tend to suppress and hold things back, not recognizing the nature of things as they really are, not recognizing our human predicament and learning from it. In meditation we're allowing the mind to open up and let the things that have been suppressed and repressed become conscious, because when things become conscious they have a way of ceasing rather than just being repressed again. We allow things to take their course to cessation, we allow things to go away rather than just push them away.

Usually we just push certain things away from us, refusing to accept or recognize them. Whenever we feel upset or annoyed with anyone, when we're bored, or when unpleasant feelings arise, we look at the beautiful flowers or the sky, read a book, watch TV, do something. We're never fully consciously bored, fully angry. We don't recognize our despair or disappointment, because we can always run off into something else. We can always go to the refrigerator, eat cakes and sweets, listen to the stereo. It's so easy to absorb into music, away from boredom and despair into something that's exciting or interesting or calming or beautiful.

Look at how dependent we are on watching TV and reading. There are so many books now that they'll all have to be burnt - useless books everywhere, everybody's writing things without having anything worth saying. Today's not-so-pleasant film stars write their biographies and make a lot of money. Then there are the gossip columns: people get away from the boredom of their own existence, their discontent with it, the tediousness, by reading gossip about movie stars and public figures.

We've never really accepted boredom as a conscious state. As soon as it comes into the mind we start looking for something interesting, some-thing pleasant. But in meditation we're allowing boredom to be. We're allowing ourselves to be fully consciously bored, fully depressed, fed up, jealous, angry, disgusted. All the nasty unpleasant experiences of life that we have repressed out of consciousness and never really looked at, never really accepted, we begin to accept into conscious-ness - not as personality problems any more, but just out of compassion. Out of kindness and wisdom we allow things to take their natural course to cessation, rather that just keep them going round in the same old cycles of habit. If we have no way of letting things take their natural course, then we're always controlling, always caught in some dreary habit of mind. When we're jaded and depressed we're unable to appreciate the beauty of things, because we never really see them as they truly are.

I remember one experience I had in my first year of meditation in Thailand. I spent most of that year by myself in a little hut, and the first few months were really terrible all kinds of things kept coming up in my mind - obsessions and fears and terror and hatred. I'd never felt so much hatred. I'd never thought of myself as one who hated people, but during those first few months of meditation it seemed like I hated everybody. I couldn't think of anything nice about anyone, there was so much aversion coming up into consciousness. Then one afternoon I started having this strange vision - I thought I was going crazy, actually - I saw people walking off my brain. I saw my mother just walk out of my brain and into emptiness, disappear into space. Then my father and my sister followed. I actually saw these visions walking out of my head. I thought, 'I'm crazy! I've gone off!' - but it wasn't an unpleasant experience.

The next morning when I woke from sleep and looked around, I felt that everything I saw was beautiful. Everything, even the most unbeautiful detail, was beautiful. I was in a state of awe. The hut itself was a crude structure, not beautiful by anyone's standards, but it looked to me like a palace. The scrubby looking trees outside looked like a most beautiful forest. Sunbeams were streaming through the window onto a plastic dish, and the plastic dish looked beautiful! That sense of beauty stayed with me for about a week, and then reflecting on it I suddenly realized that that's the way things really are when the mind is clear. Up to that time I'd been looking through a dirty window, and over the years I'd become so used to the scum and dirt on the window that I didn't realize it was dirty, I'd thought that that's the way it was.

When we get used to looking through a dirty window everything seems grey, grimy and ugly. Meditation is a way of cleaning the window, purifying the mind, allowing things to come up into consciousness and letting them go. Then with the wisdom faculty, the Buddha-wisdom, we observe how things really are. It's not just attaching to beauty, to purity of mind, but actually understand-ing. It is wisely reflecting on the way nature operates, so that we are no longer deluded by it into creating habits for our life through ignorance.

Birth means old age, sickness and death, but that's to do with your body, it's not you. Your human body is not really yours. No matter what your particular appearance might be, whether you are healthy or sickly, whether you are beautiful or not beautiful, whether you are black or white or whatever, it's all non-self. This is what we mean by anatta, that human bodies belong to nature, that they follow the laws of nature: they are born, they grow up, they get old and they die.

Now we may understand that rationally, but emotionally there is a very strong attachment to the body. In meditation we begin to see this attach-ment. We don't take the position that we shouldn't be attached, saying: 'The problem with me is that I'm attached to my body. I shouldn't be. It's bad, isn't it? If I was a wise person I wouldn't be attached to it.' That's starting from an ideal again. It's like trying to start climbing a tree from the top saying, 'I should be at the top of the tree. I shouldn't be down here.' But as much as we'd like to think that we're at the top, we have to humbly accept that we aren't. To begin with, we have to be at the trunk of the tree, where the roots are, looking at the most coarse and ordinary things before we can start identifying with anything at the top of the tree.

This is the way of wise reflection. It's not just purifying the mind and then attaching to purity. It's not just trying to refine consciousness so that we can induce high states of concentration whenever we feel like it, because even the most refined states of sensory consciousness are unsatisfactory, they're dependent on so many other things. Nibbana is not dependent on any other condition. Conditions of any quality, be they ugly, nasty, beautiful, refined or whatever, arise and pass away - but they don't interfere with Nibbana, with the peace of the mind.

We are not inclining away from the sensory world through aversion, because if we try to anni-hilate the senses then that too becomes a habit that we blindly acquire, trying to get rid of that which we don't like. That's why we have to be very patient.

This lifetime as a human being is a lifetime of meditation. See the rest of your life as the span of meditation rather than this ten-day retreat. You may think: 'I meditated for ten days. I thought I was enlightened but somehow when I got home I didn't feel enlightened any more. I'd like to go back and do a longer retreat where I can feel more enlightened than I did last time. It would be nice to have a higher state of consciousness.' In fact, the more refined you go the more coarse your daily life must seem. You get high, and then when you get back to the mundane daily routines of life in the city, it's even worse than before, isn't it? Having gone so high, the ordinariness of life seems much more ordinary, gross and unpleasant. The way to insight wisdom is not making preferences for refinement over coarseness, but recognizing that both refined and coarse consciousness are impermanent conditions, that they're unsatisfactory, their nature will never satisfy us, and they're anatta, they're not what we are, they're not ours.

Thus the Buddha's teaching is a very simple one. What could be more simple than 'what is born must die'? It's not some great new philosophical discovery, even illiterate tribal people know that. You don't have to study in university to know it.
When we're young we think: 'I've got so many years left of youth and happiness.' If we're beautiful we think, 'I'm going to be young and beautiful forever,' because it seems that way. If we're twenty years old, having a good time, life is wonderful and somebody says, 'You are going to die some day', we may think, 'What a depressing person. Let's not invite him again to our house.' We don't want to think about death, we want to think about how wonderful life is, how much pleasure we can get out of it.

So as meditators we reflect on getting old and dying. This is not being morbid or sick or depressing, but it's considering the whole cycle of existence; and when we know that cycle, then we are more careful about how we live. People do horrible things because they don't reflect on their deaths. They don't wisely reflect and consider, they just follow their passions and feelings of the moment, trying to get pleasure and then feeling angry and depressed when life doesn't give them what they want.

Reflect on your own life and death and the cycles of nature. Just observe what delights and what depresses. See how we can feel very positive or very negative. Notice how we want to attach to beauty or to pleasant feelings or to inspiration. It's really nice to feel inspired, isn't it? 'Buddhism is the greatest religion of them all' or 'When I discovered the Buddha I was so happy, it's a wonderful discovery!' When we get a little bit doubtful, a little bit depressed, we go and read an inspiring book and get high. But remember, getting high is an impermanent condition, it's like getting happy, you have to keep doing it, sustaining it and after you keep doing something over and over again you no longer feel happy with it. How many sweets can you eat? At first they make you happy - and then they make you sick.

So depending on religious inspiration is not enough. If you attach to inspiration, then when you get fed up with Buddhism you'll go off and find some new thing to inspire you. It's like attaching to romance, when it disappears from the relationship you start looking for someone else to feel romantic towards. Years ago in America I met a woman who'd been married six times, and she was only about thirty-three. I said, 'You'd think you would have learned after the third or fourth time. Why do you keep getting married?' She said, 'It's the romance. I don't like the other side but I love the romance.' At least she was honest, but not terribly wise. Romance is a condition that leads to disillusionment.

Romance, inspiration, excitement, adventure, all these things rise to a peak and then condition their opposites, just as an inhalation conditions an exhalation. Just think of inhaling all the time. It's like having one romance after another, isn't it? How long can you inhale? The inhalation conditions the exhalation, both are necessary. Birth conditions death, hope conditions despair and inspiration conditions disillusionment. So when we attach to hope we're going to feel despair. When we attach to excitement it's going to take us to boredom. When we attach to romance it will take us to disillusion-ment and divorce. When we attach to life it takes us to death. So recognize that it's the attachment that causes the suffering, attaching to conditions and expecting them to be more than what they are.
So much of life for so many people seems to be waiting and hoping for something to happen, expecting and anticipating some success or pleasure - or maybe worrying and fearing that some painful, unpleasant thing is just lying in wait. You may hope that you will meet somebody who you'll really love or have some great experience, but attaching to hope takes you to despair.

By wise reflection we begin to understand the things that create misery in our lives. We see that actually we are the creators of that misery. Through our ignorance, through our not having wisely understood the sensory world and its limitations, we have identified with all that is unsatisfactory and impermanent, the things that can only take us to despair and death. No wonder life is so depressing! It's dreary because of the attachment, because we identify and seek ourselves in all that is by nature dukkha: unsatisfactory and imperfect.

Now when we stop doing that, when we let go, that is enlightenment. We are enlightened beings, no longer attached, no longer identified with anything, no longer deluded by the sensory world. We understand the sensory world, we know how to co-exist with it. We know how to use the sensory world for compassionate action, for joyous giving. We don't demand that it be here to satisfy us any more, to make us feel secure and safe or to give us anything, because as soon as we demand it to satisfy us it takes us to despair.

When we no longer identify with the sensory world as 'me' or 'mine', and see it as anatta, then we can enjoy the senses without seeking sense-impingement or depending on it. We no longer expect conditions to be anything other than what they are, so that when they change we can patiently and peacefully endure the unpleasant side of exist-ence. We can humbly endure sickness, pain, cold, hunger, failures and criticisms. If we're not attached to the world we can adapt to change, whatever that change may be, whether it's for the better or for the worse. If we're still attached then we can't adapt very well, we're always struggling, resisting, trying to control and manipulate everything, and then feeling frustrated, frightened or depressed at what a delusive, frightening place the world is.

If you've never really contemplated the world, never taken the time to understand and know it, then it becomes a frightening place for you. It becomes like a jungle: you don't know what's around the next tree, bush or cliff - a wild animal, a ferocious man-eating tiger, a terrible dragon or a poisonous snake.

Nibbana means getting away from the jungle. When we're inclining towards Nibbana we're moving towards the peace of the mind. Although the conditions of the mind may not be peaceful at all, the mind itself is a peaceful place. Here we are making a distinction between the mind and the conditions of mind. The conditions of mind can be happy, miserable, elated, depressed, loving or hating, worrying or fear-ridden, doubting or bored. They come and go in the mind, but the mind itself, like the space in this room, stays just at it is. The space in this room has no quality to elate or depress, does it? It is just at it is. To concentrate on the space in the room we have to withdraw our attention from the things in the room. If we concentrate on the things in the room we become happy or unhappy. We say, 'Look at that beautiful Buddha image,' or if we see something we find ugly we say, 'Oh, what a terrible disgusting thing.' We can spend our time looking at the people in the room, thinking whether we like this person or dislike that person.

We can form opinions about people being this way or that way, remember what they did in the past, speculate about what they will do in the future, seeing others as possible sources of pain or gratification to ourselves.

However, if we withdraw our attention it doesn't mean that we have to push everyone else out of the room. If we don't concentrate on or absorb into any of the conditions, then we have a perspective, because the space in the room has no quality to depress or elate. The space can contain us all, all conditions can come and go within it.

Moving inwards, we can apply this to the mind. The mind is like space, there's room in it for everything or nothing. It doesn't really matter whether it is filled or has nothing in it, because we always have a perspective once we know the space of the mind, its emptiness. Armies can come into the mind and leave, butterflies, rainclouds or nothing. All things can come and go through, without us being caught in blind reaction, struggling resistance, control and manipulation.

So when we abide in the emptiness of our minds we're moving away - we're not getting rid of things, but no longer absorbing into conditions that exist in the present or creating any new ones. This is our practice of letting go. We let go of our identification with conditions by seeing that they are all impermanent and not-self. It is what we mean by vipassana meditation. It's really looking at, witnessing, listening, observing that whatever comes must go. Whether it's coarse or refined, good or bad, whatever comes and goes is not what we are. We're not good, we're not bad, we're not male or female, beautiful or ugly. These are changing conditions in nature, which are not-self. This is the Buddhist way to enlightenment: going towards Nibbana, inclining towards the spaciousness or emptiness of mind rather than being born and caught up in the conditions.

Now you may ask, 'Well if I'm not the conditions of mind, if I'm not a man or a woman, this or that, then what am I?, Do you want me to tell you who you are? Would you believe me if I did? What would you think if I ran out and started asking you who I am? It's like trying to see your own eyes: you can't know yourself, because you are yourself. You can only know what is not yourself - and so that solves the problem, doesn't it? If you know what is not yourself, then there is no question about what you are. If I said, 'Who am I? I'm trying to find myself,' and I started looking under the shrine, under the carpet, under the curtain, you'd think, 'Venerable Sumedho has really flipped out, he's gone crazy, he's looking for himself.' 'I'm looking for me, where am I?' is the most stupid question in the world. The problem is not who we are but our belief and identification with what we are not. That's where the suffering is, that's where we feel misery and depression and despair. It's our identity with everything that is not ourselves that is dukkha. When you identify with that which is unsatisfactory, you're going to be dissatisfied and discontented - it's obvious, isn't it?

So the path of the Buddhist is a letting go, rath-er than trying to find anything. The problem is the blind attachment, the blind identification with the appearance of the sensory world. You needn't get rid of the sensory world but learn from it, watch it, no longer allow yourselves to be deluded by it. Keep penetrating it with Buddha-wisdom, keep using this Buddha-wisdom so that you become more at ease with being wise, rather that making yourself become wise. Just by listening, observing, being awake, being aware, the wisdom will become clear. You'll be using wisdom in regard to your body, in regard to your thoughts, feelings, memories, emotion, all of these things. You'll see and witness, allowing them to pass by and let them go.

So at this time you have nothing else to do except be wise from one moment to the next.

The End

Notes

1 The dissolution of the Five Aggregates, in common parlance the 'death', of an enlightened one.

2 From Kamma, which refers to volitional actions of body, speech and mind. All such actions give rise to appropriate results. The 'Law of Kamma' is the law of cause-and-effect, seen on the ethical plane.

3 Literally, 'mindfulness of the in-breath and the out-breath'.

4 samadhi, jhana: meditative states characterized by profound stillness of mind.

The ultimate goal of Buddhism is the deathless condition of Nibbana, the sole reality. Hence, one who aspires to that state should renounce mundane pursuits and attachments, which are ephemeral, for the sake of that reality. But there are very few who are sufficiently mature to develop themselves to achieve that state in this very life. Thus the Buddha does not force the life of renunciation upon those who lack the spiritual capacity to embark upon the higher life.

Therefore, one should follow the path of mundane advantage which is twofold, namely, the advantage obtainable here in this very life and the advantage obtainable in future lives, as steps on the path to the spiritual life. Although one may enjoy the pleasures of life, one must regard one's body as an instrument with which to practice virtue for one's own and other's benefit; in short, one should live a useful life of moral integrity, a life of simplicity and paucity of wants.

As regards acquisition of wealth, the Buddha said: "One must be diligent and energetic," and as regards the safeguarding of one's wealth, "one must be mindful and economical."

It is not impossible that even the life of such a man may be somehow or other disturbed and harassed as a result of the actions of "unskillful" men. Although this might induce him to abandon his chosen path, it is at such times that one must not forget the steps to be taken for the purpose of establishing peace. According to the teaching of the Buddha this includes the reflection: "Others may be harmful, but I shall be harmless, thus should I train myself." We must not forget that the whole spirit of Buddhism is one of pacification. In the calm and placid atmosphere of the Buddha's teaching there is every chance, every possibility, of removing hatred, jealousy and violence from our mind.

It is no wonder if we, at times, in our everyday life, feel angry with somebody about something. But we should not allow this feeling to reside in our mind. We should try to curb it at the very moment it has arisen. Generally there are eight ways to curb or control our anger.

The first method is to recollect the teachings of the Buddha. On very many occasions the Buddha explained the disadvantages of an angry temper. Here is one of his admonitions:

> Suppose some bandits catch one of you and sever his body limb from limb with a two-handed saw, and if he should feel angry thereby even at that moment, he is no follower of my teaching.
> -- Kakacupama Sutta, Majjhima Nikaya 21

Again:

> As a log from a pyre, burnt at both ends and fouled in the middle, serves neither for firewood in the village nor for timber in the forest, so is such a wrathful man.
>
> -- Anguttara Nikaya II, 95

Further, we may consider the Buddha's advice to be found in the //Dhammapada//:

> He abused me, he beat me, he defeated me, he robbed me of my property. Whosoever harbor such thoughts will never be able to still their enmity.
>
> Never indeed is hatred stilled by hatred; it will only be stilled by non-hatred -- this is an eternal law.
> -- Dhp., vv. 4-5

> Do not speak harshly to anyone. Those who are harshly spoken to might retaliate against you. Angry words hurt other's feelings, even blows may overtake you in return.
> -- Dhp., v. 133

> Forbearance is the highest observance. Patience is the highest virtue. So the Buddhas say.
> -- Dhp., v. 184

Let a man remove his anger. Let him root out his pride. Let him overcome all fetters of passions. No sufferings overtake him who neither clings to mind-and-body nor claims anything of the world.

-- Dhp., v. 221

Conquer anger by non-anger. Conquer evil by good. Conquer miserliness by liberality. Conquer a liar by truthfulness.

-- Dhp., v. 223

Guard your mind against an outburst of wrong feelings. Keep your mind controlled. Renouncing evil thoughts, develop purity of mind.

-- Dhp., v. 233

If by contemplating the advice of the Buddha in this way one cannot curb his anger, then let him try the second method.

Naturally, any bad person may possess some good quality. Some men are evil in mind but speak in deceptive language or slyly perform their deeds in an unsuspecting manner. Some men are coarse only in their language but not in their mind or deeds. Some men are coarse and cruel in their deeds but neither in their speech nor in their mind. Some are soft and kind in mind, speech and deed as well.

When we feel angry with any person, we should try to find out some good in him, either in his way of thinking, or in his way of speaking or in his way of acting. If we find some redeeming quality in him, we should ponder its value and ignore his bad qualities as natural weaknesses that are to be found in everyone. Whilst we think thus, our mind will soften and we may even feel kindly towards that person. If we develop this way of thinking we will be able to curb or eliminate our anger towards him.

At times, this method may not be successful and we shall then have to try the third method. Basically, this entails reflecting thus: "He has done some wrong to me and in so doing has spoiled his mind. Then why should I spoil or impair my own mind because of his foolishness?

Sometimes I ignore support or help offered by my relatives; sometimes their tears even shed because of my activities. Being a person of such type myself, why should I not therefore ignore that foolish man's deed?

"He has done that wrong, being subject to anger, should I too follow him, making my mind subject to anger? Is it not foolish to imitate him? He harboring his hatred destroys himself internally. Why should I, on his account, destroy my reputation?

"All things are momentary. Both his mind and body are momentary too. The thoughts and the body with which the wrong was done to me are not now existing. What I call the same man now are the thoughts and physical parts which are different from the earlier ones that harmed me although belonging to the same psycho-physical process. Thus, one thought together with one mass of physical parts did me some wrong, and vanished there and then, giving place to succeeding thoughts and material parts to appear. So with which am I getting angry? WIth the vanished and disappeared thoughts and physical parts or with the thoughts and material parts which do not do any wrong now? Should I get angry with one thing which is innocent whereas another thing has done me wrong and vanished?

"The so-called 'I' is not the same for two consecutive moments. At the moment the wrong was done there was another thought and another mass of molecules which were regarded as 'I', whereas what are regarded as 'I' at the present moment are a different thought and collection of molecules, though belonging to the same process. Thus some other being did wrong to someone else and another gets angry with another. Is this not a ridiculous situation?"

If we scrutinize the exact nature of our life and its happenings in this manner, our anger might subside or vanish there and then.

There is another way, too, to eliminate upsurging anger. Suppose we think of someone who has done wrong to us. On such occasions we should remember that we suffer harm or loss as a result of our previous //kamma//. Even if others were angry with us, they could not harm us if there were no latent force of past unwholesome //kamma// committed by us which took advantage of this opportunity to arouse our adversary. So it is I who am responsible for this harm or loss and not anybody else. And at the same time, now while I am suffering the result of past //kamma//, if I, on account of this, should get angry and do any harm to him, by that do I accumulate much more unwholesome //kamma// which would bring me correspondingly unwholesome results.

If we recall to mind this law of //kamma//, our anger may subside immediately. We can consider such a situation in another way too. We as the followers of Buddha believe that our Bodhisatta passed through incalculable numbers of lives practicing virtues before he attained Buddhahood. The Buddha related the history of some of his past lives as illustrations to teach us how he practiced these virtues. The lives of the prince Dhammapala and the ascetic Khantivadi are most illustrative and draw our attention.

At one time the Bodhisatta had been born as the son of a certain king named Mahapatapa. The child was named Culla Dhammapala. One day the Queen sat on a chair fondling her child and did not notice the King passing by. The King thought the Queen was so proud of her child as not to get up from her chair even when she saw that her lord the King passed that way. So he grew angry and immediately sent for the executioner. When he came the King ordered him to snatch the child from the Queen's arms and cut his hands, feet and head off, which he did instantly. The child, our Bodhisatta, suffered all that with extreme patience and did not grow ill-tempered or relinquish his impartial love for his cruel father, lamenting mother and the executioner. So far had he matured in the practice of forbearance and loving-kindness at that time.

At another time, our Bodhisatta was an ascetic well-known for his developed virtue of forbearance and consequently people named him Khantivadi, the preacher of forbearance. One day he visited Benares and took his lodgings at the royal pleasure grove. Meanwhile, the King passed that way with his harem and, seeing the ascetic seated under a tree, asked what virtue he was practicing, to which the ascetic replied that of forbearance. The King was a materialist who regarded the practice of virtue to be humbug. So, hearing the words of the ascetic, he sent for the executioner and ordered him to cut off his hands and feet and questioned the ascetic as to whether he could hold to forbearance at the severing of his limbs. The ascetic did not feel ill-tempered but even at that time he lay down extending his loving-kindness and holding his forbearance undiminished. He spoke to the King in reply to the effect that his forbearance and other virtues were not in his limbs but in his mind. The King, being unsuccessful in his attempts to disturb the ascetic's feelings, grew angrier and kicked the stomach of the ascetic with his heel and went away. Meanwhile, the King's minister came over and, seeing what had happened, bowed before the dying ascetic and begged him saying: "Venerable one, none of us agreed to this cruel act of the King and we are all sorrowing over what has been done to you by that devilish man. We ask you to curse the King but not us." At this the ascetic said: "May that king who has caused my hands and feet to be cut off, as well as you, live long in happiness. Persons who practice virtues like me never get angry." Saying this, he breathed his last.

Since the Buddha in his past lives, while still imperfect like us, practiced forbearance and loving-kindness to such a high extent, why cannot we follow his example?

When we remember and think of similar noble characters of great souls, we should be able to bear any harm, unmoved by anger. Or if we consider the nature of the round of rebirths in this beginningless and infinite universe, we will be able to curb our upspringing anger. For, it is said by the Buddha: "It is not easy to find a being who has not been your mother, your father, your brother, sister, son or daughter." Hence with regard to the person whom we have now taken for our enemy, we should think: "This one now, in the past has been my mother who bore me in her womb for nine months, gave birth to me, unweariedly cleansed me of impurities, hid me in her bosom, carried me on her hip and nourished me. This one was my father in another life and spent time and energy, engaged in toilsome business, with a view to maintaining me, even sacrificing life for my sake", and so on. When we ponder over these facts, it should be expected that our arisen anger against our enemy will subside.

And further, we should reflect on the advantages of the development of mind through the practice of extending loving-kindness. For, the Buddha has expounded to us eleven advantages to be looked for from its development. What are the eleven? The person who fully develops loving-kindness sleeps happily. He wakes happily. He experiences no evil dreams. He is beloved of men. He is beloved even of non-human beings. He is protected by the gods. He can be harmed neither by fire, poison or a weapon. His mind is quickly composed. His complexion is serene. At the moment of his death he passes away unbewildered. If he can go no further along the path of realization, he will at least be reborn in the heavenly abode of the Brahma Devas.

So, by every similar and possible way should we endeavor to quench our anger and at last be able to extend our loving-kindness towards any and every being in the world.

When we are able to curb our anger and control our mind, we should extend from ourselves boundless love as far as we can imagine throughout every direction pervading and touching all living beings with loving-kindness. We should practice this meditation every day at regular times without any break. As a result of this practice, we will be able, one day, to attain to the //jhanas// or meditative absorptions, comprising four grades which entail the control of sensuality, ill-will and many other passions, bringing at the same time purity, serenity and peace of mind.

APPENDIX:
Two Stories Retold from the Buddhist Texts

The Reviler

Once while the Blessed One stayed near Rajagaha in the Veluvana Monastery at the Squirrels' Feeding Place, there lived at Rajagha a Brahmin of the Bharadvaja clan who was later called "the Reviler." When he learned that one of his clan had gone forth from home life and had become a monk under the recluse Gotama, he was angry and displeased. And in that mood he went to see the Blessed One, and having arrived he reviled and abused him in rude and harsh speech.

Thus being spoken to, the Blessed One said: "How is it, Brahmin: do you sometimes receive visits from friends, relatives or other guests?"

"Yes, Master Gotama, I sometimes have visitors."

"When they come, do you offer to them various kinds of foods and a place for resting?"

"Yes, I sometimes do so."

"But if, Brahmin, your visitors do not accept what you offer, to whom does it then belong?"

"Well, Master Gotama, if they do not accept it, these things remain with us."

"It is just so in this case, Brahmin: you revile us who do not revile in return, you scold us who do not scold in return, you abuse us who do not abuse in return. So we do not accept it from you and hence it remains with you, it belongs to you, Brahmin."...

[The Buddha finally said:]

"Whence should wrath rise for him who void of wrath,
Holds on the even tenor of his way,
Self-tamed, serene, by highest insight free?

"Worse of the two is he who, when reviled,

Reviles again. Who doth not when reviled,
Revile again, a two-fold victory wins.
Both of the other and himself he seeks
The good; for he the other's angry mood
Doth understand and groweth calm and still.
He who of both is a physician, since
Himself he healeth and the other too, --
Folk deem him a fool, they knowing not the Norm." [*]

Abridged and freely rendered from Samyutta Nikaya, Brahmana Samyutta, No. 2. Verses translated by C. A. F. Rhys Davids, in "Kindred Sayings", vol. I.

* [The "Norm" or law (dhamma), here referred to, may be expressed in the words of the Dhammapada (v. 5):

"Not by hating hatred ceases
In this world of tooth and claw;
Love alone from hate releases --
This is the Eternal Law."

Translated by Francis Story]

THE ANGER-EATING DEMON

Retold from an ancient Buddhist Story

by Nyanaponika Thera

Once there lived a demon who had a peculiar diet: he fed on the anger of others. And as his feeding ground was the human world, there was no lack of food for him. He found it quite easy to provoke a family quarrel, or national and racial hatred. Even to stir up a war was not very difficult for him. And whenever he succeeded in causing a war, he could properly gorge himself without much further effort; because once a war starts, hate multiplies by its own momentum and affects even normally friendly people. So the demon's food supply became so rich that he sometimes had to restrain himself from over-eating, being content with nibbling just a small piece of resentment found close-by.

But as it often happens with successful people, he became rather overbearing and one day when feeling bored he thought: "Shouldn't I try it with the gods?" On reflection he chose the Heaven of the Thirty-three Deities, ruled by Sakka, Lord of Gods. He knew that only a few of these gods had entirely eliminated the fetters of ill-will and aversion, though they were far above petty and selfish quarrels. So by magic power he transferred himself to that heavenly realm and was lucky enough to come at a time when Sakka the Divine King was absent. There was none in the large audience hall and without much ado the demon seated himself on Sakka's empty throne, waiting quietly for things to happen, which he hoped would bring him a good feed. Soon some of the gods came to the hall and first they could hardly believe their own divine eyes when they saw that ugly demon sitting on the throne, squat and grinning. Having recovered from their shock, they started to shout and lament: "Oh you ugly demon, how can you dare to sit on the throne of our Lord? What utter cheekiness! What a crime! you should be thrown headlong into the hell and straight into a boiling cauldron! You should be quartered alive! Begone! Begone!"

But while the gods were growing more and more angry, the demon was quite pleased because from moment to moment he grew in size, in strength and in power. The anger he absorbed into his system started to ooze from his body as a smoky red-glowing mist. This evil aura kept the gods at a distance and their radiance was dimmed.

Suddenly a bright glow appeared at the other end of the hall and it grew into a dazzling light from which Sakka emerged, the King of Gods. He who had firmly entered the undeflectible Stream that leads Nibbana-wards, was unshaken by what he saw. The smoke-screen created by the gods' anger parted when he slowly and politely approached the usurper of his throne. "Welcome, friend! Please remain seated. I can take another chair. May I offer you the drink of hospitality? Our Amrita is not bad this year. Or do you prefer a stronger brew, the vedic Soma?"

While Sakka spoke these friendly words, the demon rapidly shrank to a diminutive size and finally disappeared, trailing behind a whiff of malodorous smoke which likewise soon dissolved.

The gist of this story dates back to the discourses of the Buddha. But even now, over 2500 years later, our world looks as if large hordes of Anger-eating Demons were haunting it and were kept well nourished by millions slaving for them all over the earth. Fires of hate and wide-traveling waves of violence threaten to engulf mankind. Also the grass roots of society are poisoned by conflict and discord, manifesting in angry thoughts and words and in violent deeds. Is it not time to end this self-destructive slavery of man to his impulses of hate and aggression which only serve the demoniac forces? Our story tells how these demons of hate can be exorcised by the power of gentleness and love. If this power of love can be tested and proven, at grass-root level, in the widely spread net of personal relationships, society at large, the world at large, will not remain unaffected by it.

THE BUDDHIST PUBLICATION SOCIETY

The BPS is an approved charity dedicated to making known the Teaching of the Buddha, which has a vital message for people of all creeds. Founded in 1958, the BPS has published a wide variety of books and booklets covering a great range of topics. Its publications include accurate annotated translations of the Buddha's discourses, standard reference works, as well as original contemporary expositions of Buddhist thought and practice. These works present Buddhism as it truly is -- a dynamic force which has influenced receptive minds for the past 2500 years and is still as relevant today as it was when it first arose. A full list of our publications will be sent upon request with an enclosure of U.S. $1.00 or its equivalent to cover air mail postage.

1. New York Times Interview with the Dalai Lama 367

(from CND)
Source: The New York Times, 11/28/1993
Written by: Claudia Dreifus

The last place one expects to find His Holiness Tenzin Gyatso, the 14th Dalai Lama of Tibet, the exiled secular and religious leader of the Tibetan people, the winner of the 1989 Nobel Peace Prize, the world's leading exponent of nonviolent political change, is at a glitzy Tucson, Ariz., golfing resort called the Sheraton El Conquistador. Yet there he was on a recent autumn morning, dressed in his traditional maroon robes, surrounded by Buddhist monks and non-Buddhist bodyguards, astonishing tourists as he rushed past the snack bar.

The Dalai Lama had come to this unlikely corner of the world to give a series of interpretive readings from "A Guide to the Bodhisattva's Way of Life" by Shantideva, an eighth-century Buddhist saint. For five full days, 1,500 attendees risked bad backs and cramped hands to sit for hours taking notes on the nature of patience. For them, participants in the expanding Buddhist movement in the Western world, this was a rare opportunity to study with the head of the faith -- the equivalent of taking Bible classes from the Pope. Moreover, many of the aspirants were more secular types, veterans of the 1960's who'd come to regard the Dalai Lama as the Rev. Dr. Martin Luther King Jr., the Mahatma Gandhi of this political moment. It is a forum the Dalai Lama clearly enjoys, a needed break from routine as head of the Tibetan government-in-exile in India. "I am a simple Buddhist monk -- no more, no less," he often says of himself. At the teachings, he gets to be that.

Yet his life has been anything but simple. Born in 1935 to a peasant family in northeast Tibet, he was, at the age of 2, identified after the death of the 13th Dalai Lama as the 14th reincarnation of the Buddha of Compassion. That recognition brought a new name; Lhamo Thondup now became Jetsun Jamphel Ngawang Lobsang Yeshe Tenzin Gyatso (Holy Lord, Gentle Glory, Eloquent, Compassionate, Learned Defender of the Faith, Ocean of Wisdom). Taken to Lhasa to be educated, he grew up in a 1,000-room palace, surrounded by doting monks who tutored him in subjects like philosophy, medicine and metaphysics and gave him a childhood of pure magic.

The magic ended in 1950 when the 15-year-old Dalai Lama was called upon to assume full powers as head of state. This, at the very moment the People's Liberation Army of China was invading Tibet. For the next nine years, the young ruler attempted to negotiate with Mao Zedong and Chou En-lai, who were intent on absorbing Tibet into China. Then, in 1959, after China brutally "quelled" a Tibetan civilian uprising against Chinese rule, the Dalai Lama fled to India; some 100,000 Tibetans have since followed him across the Himalayas.

In India, he was permitted to set up a government-in-exile in a small village, Dharamsala, a long day's drive from New Delhi. "His Holiness reconstructed a viable Tibetan community in India, preserving the culture of Tibet," says his close friend Robert Thurman, professor of Indo-Tibetan studies at Columbia University. "He held the Tibetan people together in exile and gave them hope during the very severe, even genocidal oppression in their homeland. He's also the first leader of Tibet to become a world leader, even without a political base -- just on his moral force."

In Tucson, a day after his teachings were completed, the Dalai Lama met in his suite with the interviewer. As would be expected from someone who has been worshiped as a demigod since age 2, he greets strangers with a mask of pleasant formality, which soon melts as he becomes engaged in ideas and conversation. An hour and a half becomes three; formality turns to laughter. One senses he's a little bored by the adulation that is his daily fare. The most striking thing about the Dalai Lama is his capacity for joy -- how widely he smiles, how amused he is by his own contradictions, his own human foibles. The journalist William Shirer once said of his interviews with Gandhi in the 1930's, "You felt you were the only person in the room, that he had all the time in the world for you." This is true of Tenzin Gyatso also.

Q: Your Holiness, you seem such a happy person. Have there been moments in your life when your faith in human goodness was tested?

The Dalai Lama: No.

Q:You've never felt in danger of becoming cynical?

A: No. Of course, when I say that human nature is gentleness, it is not 100 percent so. Every human being has that nature, but there are many people acting against their nature, being false. Certainly there have been sad moments for me. The Chinese suppressions in Lhasa in 1987, 1988, now that was sad. A great many people were killed. I am sometimes sad when I hear the personal stories of Tibetan refugees who have been tortured or beaten. Some irritation, some anger comes. But it never lasts long. I always try to think at a deeper level, to find ways to console.

Q: I understand that you were very angry during the 1990 gulf war, as angry as you've ever been.

A: Angry? No. But one thing, when people started blaming Saddam Hussein, then my heart went out to him.

Q: To Saddam Hussein?

A: Yes. Because this blaming everything on him -- it's unfair. He may be a bad man, but without his army, he cannot act as aggressively as he does. And his army, without weapons, cannot do anything. And these weapons were not produced in Iraq itself. Who supplied them? Western nations! So one day something happened and they blamed everything on him -- without acknowledging their own contributions. That's wrong. The gulf crisis also clearly demonstrated the serious implications of the arms trade. War -- without an army, killing as few people as possible -- is acceptable. But the suffering of large numbers of people due to a military mission, that is sad.

Q: Did you say that killing sometimes is acceptable?

A: Comparatively. In human society, some people do get killed, for a variety of reasons. However, when you have an established army, and countries with those armies go to war, the casualties are immense. It's not one or two casualties, it's thousands. And with nuclear weapons, it's millions, really millions. For that reason, the arms trade is really irresponsible. Irresponsible! Global demilitarization is essential.

Q: In Tibet, from the late 1950's until the early 1970's, one of your brothers was involved in leading a guerrilla movement against the Chinese. In fact, the guerrillas were supported by the C.I.A. How did you feel about that?

A: I'm always against violence. But the Tibetan guerrillas were very dedicated people. They were willing to sacrifice their own lives for the Tibetan nation. And they found a way to receive help from the C.I.A. Now, the C.I.A.'s motivation for helping was entirely political. They did not help out of genuine sympathy, not out of support for a just cause. That was not very healthy.

Today, the help and support we receive from the United States is truly out of sympathy and human compassion. In spite of their desire for good relations with China, the Congress of the United States at least supports Tibetan human rights. So this is something really precious, genuine.

Q: To change the subject, you have spoken, as few religious leaders have, of the dangers of global overpopulation.

A: Well, the population problem is a serious reality. In India, some people were reluctant to accept birth control because of religious traditions. So I thought, from the Buddhist viewpoint, there is a possibility of flexibility on this problem. I thought it might be good to speak out and eventually create more open space for leaders in other religious traditions to discuss the issue.

Q: How do you feel, then, about Pope John Paul II's continued opposition to birth control?

A: That's his religious principle. He is acting from a certain principle -- especially when he speaks about the need to respect the rights of fetuses. Actually, I feel very touched that the Pope has taken a stand on that.

Q: Can you also understand the needs of a woman who might not be able to raise a child?

A: When I was in Lithuania a few years ago, I visited a nursery and I was told, "All these children are unwanted." So I think it is better that that situation be stopped right from the beginning -- birth control. Of course, abortion, from a Buddhist viewpoint, is an act of killing and is negative, generally speaking. But it depends on the circumstances. If the unborn child will be retarded or if the birth will create serious problems for the parent, these are cases where there can be an exception. I think abortion should be approved or disapproved according to each circumstance.

Q: I understand you've experienced a major change in thinking about the role of women in the world.

A: It's not so much a change. I've gained an awareness of the sensitivity of women's issues; even in the 1960's and 1970's, I didn't have much knowledge of this problem. The basic Buddhist stand on the question of equality between the genders is age-old. At the highest tantric levels, at the highest esoteric level, you must respect women: every woman. In Tibetan society, there has been some careless discrimination. Yet there have been exceptional women, high lamas, who are respected throughout Tibet.

Q: In a recent issue of the Buddhist magazine Tricycle, the actor Spalding Gray asked you about your dreams, and you said you sometimes dreamt of women fighting.

A: Women fighting? No, no. . . . What I meant was that, in my dreams, sometimes women approach me and I immediately realize, "I'm bhikshu, I'm monk." So you see, this is sort of sexual. . . .

Q: In your dreams, you realize this and you "fight" the feeling?

A: Yes. Similarly, I have dreams where someone is beating me and I want to respond. Then, immediately I remember, "I am monk and I should not kill."

Q: Do you ever experience rages? Even Jesus had rages.

A: Don't compare me with Jesus. He is a great master, a great master. . . . But as to your question, when I was younger, I did get angry. In the past 30 years, no. One thing, the hatred, the ill-feeling, that's almost gone.

Q: So what are your weaknesses and faults?

A: Laziness.

Q: It is said that you get up at 4 in the morning. How can you be lazy?

A: It's not that kind of laziness. For instance, sometimes, when I visit some Western countries, I develop an enthusiasm to improve my English. But when I actually make the effort to study, after a few days, my enthusiasm is finished. [Laughs.] That is laziness. Other weaknesses are, I think, anger and attachments. I'm attached to my watch and my prayer beads. Then, of course, sometimes beautiful women. . . . But then, many monks have the same experience. Some of it is curiosity: If you use this, what is the feeling? [Points to his groin.]

Then, of course, there is the feeling that something sexual must be something very happy, a marvelous experience. When this develops, I always see the negative side. There's an expression from Nagurajuna, one of the Indian masters: "If you itch, it's nice to scratch it. But it's better to have no itch at all." Similarly with the sexual desire. If it is possible to be without that feeling, there is much peace. [Smiles.] And without sex, there's no worry about abortion, condoms, things like that.

Q: Sir, your laugh is world famous -- what makes you laugh?

A: There is something in my family . . . a tendency to laugh a lot. One brother, Gyalo Thondup, doesn't laugh too much. Another, Lobsang Samten, was very fond of cracking dirty jokes. A third, Taktser Rinpoche, he also laughed a lot. And Tibetans generally are very good-natured. In my childhood, I had a religious assistant who always told me, "If you can really laugh with full abandonment, it's very good for your health."

Q: What do you do for leisure, to relax?

A: I like to let my thoughts come to me each morning before I get up. I meditate for a few hours and that is like recharging. After that, my daily conduct is usually driven by the motivation to help, to create a positive atmosphere for others. I garden . . . gardening is one of my hobbies. Also, reading encyclopedias with pictures. [Laughs.] I am a man of peace, but I am fond of looking at picture books of the Second World War. I own some, which I believe are produced by Time-Life. I've just ordered a new set. Thirty books.

Q: Really? Why does the Reincarnation of Compassion have such a fascination with one of the most terrible events in human history?

A: Perhaps because the stories are so negative and gruesome, they strengthen my belief in nonviolence. [Smiles.] However, I find many of the machines of violence very attractive. Tanks, airplanes, warships, especially aircraft carriers. And the German U-boats, submarines. . . .

Q: I once read that as a little boy in Lhasa, you liked war toys.

A: Yes, very much. I also had an air rifle in Lhasa. And I have one in India. I often feed small birds, but when they come together, hawks spot them and catch them -- a very bad thing. So in order to protect these small birds, I keep the air rifle.

Q: So it is a Buddhist rifle?

A: [Laughs] A compassionate rifle!

Q: Let me ask you a difficult question in that regard. You are indispensable to your movement. Are you ever afraid you might suffer the same fate as Mahatma Gandhi and Martin Luther King Jr.?

A: The thought sometimes crosses my mind. As far as being "indispensable," people can carry on without me.

Q: Asian scholars say that the Tibetan nation wouldn't have survived after 1959 if you had not been such a skilled political leader. That being the case, aren't you concerned that the Chinese might try to finish off the Tibetan independence movement by killing you?

A: Some Chinese have frankly said to Tibetans: "You only have one person. If we take care of that, the problem is solved."

Q: Have you prepared yourself for the possibility?

A: Not really, although in general, as a Buddhist, my daily meditation involves preparation for death. Death by natural causes, I'm fully prepared for. If sudden death comes, that is tragic -- from the viewpoint of practitioners.

Q: In September, the Palestinians accepted a compromise for regional autonomy. If the Chinese offered such a deal, would you accept?

A: Actually, for the past 14 years, my basic position has been very similar. There is one difference: in the Palestinian case, virtually every government viewed the Territories as occupied and showed concern. In the Tibetan case only the U.S. Congress and some legal experts consider Tibet an occupied land with the right of self-determination.

Q: What was your feeling when you watched the recent signing of the Middle East peace agreement?

A: It's a great achievement. This issue is just one year older than the Tibetan issue. Our problem started in 1949, theirs in 1948. In those years, a lot of hatred developed. Imagine: Palestinians were taught to hate from childhood. That was seen as good for the national interest. In fact, it was rather negative; a lot of violence took place. Now, both sides came to an agreement in the spirit of reconciliation, in the spirit of nonviolence. This is wonderful.

Q: Are there any signs that the Chinese might accept a compromise?

A: [Quickly] No.

Q: You once wrote that the Chinese want to rule the world. Do you still think so?

A: I didn't mean it that way. The remark was related more to the Marxist world intention, rather than Chinese national historical expansionism.

Q: Do you think that still is the case?

A: It's changed, I think. That kind of spirit . . . perhaps in the 1960's, with the Cultural Revolution, it was there. On the Soviet side, Khrushchev realized around 1956 that that kind of goal was not realistic. By the end of the Cultural Revolution, in the 1970's, the Chinese realized that it was out of the question. Now I think the issue is Chinese nationalist historic chauvinism. To them, all other people are barbarians.

Q: Including you?

A: Oh, certainly! Of course! They are a proud nation. With Marxism gone, the strategy is to reach the economic levels of Western countries. They consider themselves a champion of the third world, particularly after the Soviet Union collapsed. They see Russia as having become a part of the West. So what you have is the most populous nation, the worst kind of totalitarian system, the rule of terror -- with nuclear weapons and with an ideology that force is the ultimate source of power. Their economy was poor, but now it is improving -- without changing those other things. Time magazine has called them "the super-power of the next century."

Q: Does that scare you?

A: We already lost our country. But I'm concerned about the world! The world community has the moral responsibility to see democracy in China. Now, how to bring it about? The Chinese intellectuals and the students, they are already a strong political force, and very essential. The world community must give every encouragement to that force. We should not indulge any act which discourages them.

Q: Did you think at the time of the Tiananmen Square uprising that the democracy movement would succeed?

A: Yes. Actually, the events of the 4th of June shocked me. I did not expect them to fire on their own people.

Q: But if the Chinese Communists have been as ruthless against Tibetans as you charge, why not against pro-democracy demonstrators?

A: Because it was their own people! How could they shoot them? During the Cultural Revolution, this was understandable. Tiananmen Square proved that a regime that would have no hesitation to shoot their own people, such a regime. . . . There should be no doubt about their attitude towards other nationalities.

Q: Given that not-so-optimistic assessment, what possible scenarios for China and Tibet do you see?

A: Basically, the Chinese Communist regime, it's only a matter of time: it will change. Worldwide today, there is a growth of freedom and democracy. And the democratic movement, inside and outside China, is still very active. Once the Chinese are willing to listen to others' problems, the Tibetans will not be against the Chinese nation. My approach is in the spirit of reconciliation. Certainly we can have an agreement.

In the meantime, the international community must support Tibet and put pressure on China. Without that, our own approach, according to the last 14 years of experience, has no hope of response.

Q: In closing, I read somewhere that you are predicting that the 21st century, unlike the 20th, is to be a century of peace and justice. Why?

A: Because I believe that in the 20th century, humanity has learned from many, many experiences. Some positive, and many negative. What misery, what destruction! The greatest number of human beings were killed in the two world wars of this century. But human nature is such that when we face a tremendous critical situation, the human mind can wake up and find some other alternative. That is a human capacity.

THE BENEFIT OF DOING NYUNG NAY

By keeping the eight vows which are:

l. No killing
2. No stealing
3. No sex
4. No telling lies
5. No drinking alcohol
6. No singing or dancing, makeup or ornaments
7. No evening meals
8. No sitting in high seats for a period of twenty-four hours, along with The Chenrezig Practise and reciting The Mani Mantra, by doing these things brings a real benefit to the practioner and to the place where he or she practices. By keeping the eight vows thoroughly for twenty-four hours purifies the bad karma that will cause an individual to fall into The Hell Realm and by fasting one purifies the bad karma to be reborn in The Hungry Ghost Realm. By keeping silent one purifies the bad karma to be reborn in The Animal Realm.

All suffering and misfortune comes front negative powers, so The Nyung Nay practice is to increase the positive powers so that it can bring happiness and harmony. It is one of the most effective practices to purify our defilements, and to purify environmental pollution.

By doing group practice one creates a very efficient method for extending our lives, and stopping disease, drought, and also war. The Nyung Nay practice was founded by Bhikshuni Phalmo who was a serious leprosy patient. By doing this practice for a period of twelve years along with The Chenrezig practice, she became a great Siddhi. By reciting The Mani Mantra it purifies the six seeds of the six realms and it pacifies the suffering of all beings and brings peace to the world, so in this degenerate time it is the best practice for the cause of World Peace. Finally, it brings enlightenment, Bhikshuni Phalmo attained The Celestial Body, she sees Chenrezig anytime.

Neighbors (Peeping on the neighbor girls leads to much more) byNerfHerder©

Part 1 – The Trespass

It was a smoldering summer morning, normal for Phoenix, when I chose to climb the wooden separating our backyard from our neighbor's, to retrieve the basketball that had inadvertently their yard the previous day. I absolutely hated going over to a neighbor's house, knocking on requesting something I'd lost in their yard. Looking back, I have no idea why I felt that way. W eighteen it just seemed infinitely easier to climb the fence, toss the ball back over, and return way.

Even though we'd lived next to these particular neighbors for over five years, all I knew abou they were a family of four. Two absolutely stunning young daughters lived next door to us wi and father. I had never seen either of the girls at my school, but that was no surprise, since high school about 20 miles away, and most of the teenagers in the area went to the high sch of the neighborhood. I caught only infrequent glimpses of the girls in their comings and going enough to know that their father would be graying early, trying to keep the boys at bay. The appeared to be around twenty. She had thick dark brown hair that poured over her shoulder waterfall that stopped about six inches past her shoulder blades. She always wore clothes th slender long legs and shapely ass and breasts, and they usually exposed as much tanned s including her flat tummy and concave belly button. Her sister was probably about two years her sister's shape, but was a few inches shorter, and looked a little more athletic. Her shimm platinum blonde hair reached for her heart shaped ass, and was almost always tied into a po directed the watcher's eyes to her muscular sprinter's legs. Her wardrobe leaned more towa athletic wear, and less towards sexy exhibitionism like her sister. She rarely exposed her mi was sure it was not due to any flaws in her abs. The skin she did expose was slightly darker and looked smooth as silk.

In other words they were unapproachable. They were so beautiful, that barring an act of God I would have ever gotten up enough guts to talk to either of them, much less ask one of them many evenings lying in bed, fantasizing about both girls throughout my teenage years.

And now I was in their back yard. I spotted the basketball only about twenty strides away, bu pass four windows in order to get to it. It was 8:00AM, so I was reasonably sure that both pa work, and if these girls were like most young people in their late teens and early twenties, on week of summer vacation, they were still sleeping. Nevertheless I peeked into the first windo looking for any motion. It was a deserted kitchen. The next window was an arcadia door lead

I decided to take one brief look, just to make sure she was still in her room, then I'd follow th

About fifteen minutes had passed before I heard something to my right. I moved stealthily to

I let my breath go, and tried to calm myself. I have no idea how much time passed, but when sufficiently calm, I eased towards the blonde's window and glimpsed inside. She was standin

Then I heard the shower turn on. I looked through the blonde's window again and saw that t

Part 2 - Discoveries

I could hear the blonde moving around in her bedroom, but couldn't see anything. Finally I s

"OK, but you're buying lunch," the brunette replied.

The blonde left and Tiff' began to get undressed. She removed her nightshirt and unknowing

I watched with keen interest as the blonde removed one of the bottom drawers from the wais the makeshift cubbyhole, and then replaced the drawer. She briefly checked to make sure s of her presence, and left. My curiosity was now on overload with my hormones.

Another few minutes passed, and I spied the brunette walk into the bedroom wearing one to

In the forth week I received a one line email from her:

"I want to meet you."

I didn't know how to respond. I was not a particularly good-looking guy, so even though Kelly sweetest, nicest, most beautiful girl I'd ever communicated with, I was sure that she wouldn't time of day if we had met on the street. However, jerking-off was one thing, actually getting t this golden haired goddess would surely be amazing. Than again, she didn't say anything ab chances of becoming intimate with Kelly were nonexistent if we never met. My thoughts wer finally hit the reply button and typed:

"I'm honestly uncertain. I don't think you'd find me particularly attractive. If we meet, it may d relationship that we share now. I know you must be nervous, as well, but at least you know w you.

I'll agree to meet you on one condition. Tonight, open your window and lay on your bed, wea feel comfortable in, and a blindfold. I'll come into your room by 11:00PM. If you stay blindfold talk, or do whatever you want. If tonight goes OK, then maybe I'll get up enough nerve to let sometime.

Your Spellbound Watcher."

Kelly agreed to my terms, so at 11:00 that night, I was crawling into her window for the first t sent her to the mall. "Brian," I answered truthfully.

She held out her hand and said, "Nice to meet you Brian. Have a seat, and tell me everythin

Instead of shaking her hand, I turned it palm down, and lightly kissed her knuckles, which af seemed rather silly. I was glad she was blindfolded, because I probably looked as incredibly felt, but when she lit up the room with a genuine smile, I felt better. I told her all I could witho away that I was her neighbor. We talked for hours. I couldn't get enough of her melodic voic take genuine interest in my life, which surprised me. We spoke about our mutual inexperienc sex, and about our families and friends. I told her things that I never would have told my bes time I left her house, I felt like I'd known her for years.

A little after 3:00AM, I went to bed satisfied that I'd found a new friend, but scared to death a reaction would be when I finally let her drop the blindfold.

The next evening we met in her room again. She was still blindfolded, but this time she was blue silk nightgown that accentuated her breasts, showing a nice amount of cleavage. The s trim of black lace just past her rear end. She faced the window, sitting on her bed, dangling legs off the edge. She smiled when she heard me enter the room.

"Brian?"

"Ya, it's me."

"So are you gonna let me stop wearing this blindfold yet?"

"Not yet. Maybe later. When I'm confident you won't run away screaming at the top of your lu been molested by Quasimodo." I paused looking her over, "By the way you look fantastic!"

A smile escaped her lips, and she said, "Thank you."

"Touch me? What do you mean?"

"If you won't let me see you, at least let me touch you. Let me feel this hunchback of yours,"

"I don't know, " I said hesitating.

"I could just rip this blindfold off right now, " she said slyly.

Part 8 – The Matriarch

The following day Tiffany and Kelly's Mother took the day off, and the three of them spent th so I didn't get to spend any time with my new friends. As disappointed as I was, I eagerly an sneaking over to Kelly's room that night and continuing our adventures, wondering if she ha surprises in store.

I wore my usual black sweats and black long-sleeve shirt and crept over to Kelly's window. I unnerved because the window was open, as it usually was now, but the curtains were drawn unusual turn of events, so I waited in the darkness for at least twenty minutes, listening for a coming from the room. I poked my hand through the window and parted the drapes slightly, unnoticed. I couldn't see anyone, so I parted the curtains the rest of the way and sneaked in the room. I pondered this for awhile, and decided to investigate the hole looking into Tiffany' opened the closet and found my way to the peephole behind Kelly's dresses. I peered throu pitch black. I waited for a bit, and was on my way towards the window, when the door to the turned to ask Kelly what was going on, but it wasn't Kelly. It was her mother.

"So you're Brian." It wasn't question.

I must have looked scared shitless, because she actually started to laugh. I could see where got their stunning smiles and their spellbinding eyes. Her dark hair had more curls than the g the same length as Tiffany's. Although she was undoubtedly in her forties, she looked ten ye when she smiled, she looked almost as pure and innocent as Kelly.

"You're potentially in a lot of trouble, Brian."

"Ya, I kinda figured."

"Today, Kelly asked me if she could get some kind of birth control."

"Really?"

"Yep." She walked further into the room, then closed and locked the door behind her. Then s

Their mom let out another crescent of light as her lips parted and her eyes glinted. "Well, do decisions about Tiffany yet. Wait until you talk to both of them."

"Okay."

"Now, I want two things from you Brian."

"What's that?"

"I want your solemn word that you will sit down with Kelly and Tiffany and explain to them yo same way you explained them to me. And that no matter what their decision, at the first sign Kelly, you stop having sex with Tiffany. It's also possible that you won't get the hint, but I mig tell you that it's time to stop including Tiffany, you have to do it. I've already explained to Tiffa she is most likely the one to get hurt, and she claims she understands the consequences of She said she wouldn't do anything to jeopardize Kelly's long term relationship with you, if tha two want."

"Okay…you have my word. And the second thing?"

After a brief moment of nervous hesitation, she said, "I want you to…show me what you hav daughters that have them so worked up over you."

"Huh?"

She stood up tugged some strings on her nightgown, causing it to float to the floor. She pulle strings on her panties and they too, dropped. She stood before me totally naked, and I could wasn't just their eyes and smiles that the daughters got from their mother. She was a little sh daughters, but her figure was just as dazzling. Part 9 - Reunion

Fourteen agonizingly long days after my encounter with their mother, Tiffany and Kelly rang threw open the door excitedly, and ushered the girls into the living room. Tiffany was wearin a tight black miniskirt, and a loose fitting beige crop top, which exposed her flat belly. Kelly w snug denim miniskirt, a billowy red blouse, and red sandals. They both looked spectacular a could say anything though, they pushed me onto the couch and told me to stay put. Tiffany p her purse and put it in the CD player next to the television. Soon the sounds of Billy Idol's "C was pumping out of the speakers. Both girls tantalizingly walked towards me with passion in eyes, Tiffany unzipping her skirt, and Kelly unbuttoning her blouse.

Both girls' hips gyrated in unison, as if they had choreographed their moves. Tiffany's skirt fl room, exposing her black thong panties, and Kelly's top glided to the floor, revealing her red music continued, and so did the dancing. Tiffany pulled off her top with a flare sending it into corner of the room, and giving me a look at her black lace bra with little white embroidered fl moved my eyes to Kelly, she was unzipping her skirt. She bent over and pulled the skirt up, flash of her red thongs. My attention was redrawn to Tiffany when she came over to me, spr a swift movement of her knees, and began dancing in my lap. Kelly appeared next to Tiffany to the carpet, and seductively removed her bra. The first song ended, and another started, w grinding her ass into my blue jean covered crotch. Meanwhile Kelly knelt beside me on the c breasts into my face. I had my hands on Tiffany's hips while she continued rubbing her ass a cock, but my tongue was free to flick out and caress Kelly's hardened nipples. Then Tiffany p my grasp and unhooked her bra from the front. She teased me with a few flashes of her tits, bra fly across the room, to come to rest hanging off a lampshade. Kelly moved into position and repeated the routine her sister had just performed.

Tiffany then turned around, bent over straight legged, and pulled her panties down to her an move. At this angle I could see her smooth pussy lips peeking out from between her legs. It was quite good but where the hell had it come from?

Unsure of whether I should be feeling flattered or disturbed I opened the door to see two of t

While walking around the house in just panties and bra a few weeks ago I had spied someo

This would be an ideal opportunity to let on that I knew they were looking.

Dressing conservatively I put on a pair of pastel blue cotton panties cut high on my hips and

There were boxes piled up in the yard, labelled and stacked in order so it looked as if my ad

There was a commotion of raised voices before the door opened a crack and a rather cautic appeared.

"Can I help you?" He asked, looking sharply back over his shoulder as something was said i eliciting a fit of giggles from one or more parties.

To his surprise I pushed the door open and stepped in brandishing the envelope.

"Don't you think there is something we need to talk about?" I said with feigned anger.

Met with silence I looked around, surprised at how clean and tidy the place was considering and an all male house.

Two chaps were seated at a small table looking rather sheepish; the guy who had answerec and joined them dropping down in a chair.

They looked to be late teens or early twenties and were casting nervous glances back and f they had been caught out, no doubt wondering what trouble they were in.

Unable to keep up the 'annoyed' act I placed the picture on the table and said,

"Who did this?"

They looked back and forth then two of them pointed to the other.

"He did," then by way of explanation, "he's an art student."

Walking round behind him I lightly placed my hand on his shoulder and whispered in his ear

"How do you know what I looked like naked?"

He reached out and fiddled with the picture.

"I saw you once in your house," he looked over at the others, "after he told me you walk arou

The other guy started to protest, "Hey it was him not me," he said pointing to the blond one,

"So you have all had a good look then?" I asked.

They started to protest but I held up my hand.

"Did I say that I minded?"

They looked at one another dumb struck.

"Yes, we did."

They introduced themselves as Tony and Pete who were studying media and Dave who was

"Are there any more like that or did you just do one sketch?"

Before he could answer Tony fetched a folder from a draw and passed it over.

"I hope you don't get mad." He said.

Inside there were not only sketches but several photos of me in various states of undress, o

"First I would take a picture for reference then I would sketch as much as I could before you

I took my time looking over the pictures.

They were very good,

"So you what you are telling me is that you weren't perving, you were just being artistic? We

Again they looked at one another, unsure of what to say. "Just be honest," I said, moving ro

Tony looked down at the picture, at his mates, then up at me.

I smiled to reassure him, "well?"

He looked at the other two before answering.

"Yes I did, fuck we all did, every morning and evening we waited in Dave 's room to see if yo about naked... it was the highlight of our day."

"See these two pictures?" I tapped two of the photos.

"Did you get off on watching me when you took these?"

All three of them said yes.

"Well how do you feel when tell you that I knew you were watching and did a little strip as I t

They looked back and forth.

"That's so hot said Pete, we had no idea. We thought you were just messing about for your

He looked panicky, "He doesn't know about us does he?"

Their sudden fear made me laugh, "Not yet."

"You won't tell him, will you?" Dave spluttered.

Taking the pictures I looked them over then said to Dave,

"Which one of these got you guys the hottest?"

They all agreed that it was the fully nude picture.

"Well what I am going to do is take this and have it framed for him to hang in his office."

Tony looked shocked.

"And he won't mind?"

"Not a bit, we have a very fun and exciting relationship, we tell each other everything."

Pete spoke up.

"So he won't beat the shit out of us...man that's cool."

Nodding toward the various boxes I said.

"Looks like you're moving on anyway."

"Yea," Pete replied "The people who own the place need it back and it's the end of our lease

"What will you do for your art projects then?" I asked Dave.

"Don't know, but I am sure we will never get anywhere as interesting as this place."

I smiled as an idea for some fun came to me.

"How would you like to get a few shots for future projects, up close this time?"

Tony licked his lips, "What are you getting at?"

"How about I give you a few poses to work from and at the same time give you a little somet by to make up for all the teasing."

Tony looked at the others, "I'm in." Pete stood up, "Hell me too."

Dave nodded quietly and picked up his pad and camera.

"What are we waiting for?" I said, "Show me to your room."

They lead me upstairs, the bedrooms were fresh and tidy, the bed neatly made.

"There are rules," I said, "No one touches or does anything until I tell them to, Dave you can

They agreed so I sat on the bed and unbuttoned my blouse down to the top of my breasts, I back my eyes half closed, my skirt ridding up my legs, well above my knees.

Drawing one foot up towards my buttocks and raising one knee caused my skirt to slip furthe but not so far as they could see up it.

"How does this look Dave, sexy but kind of innocent?"

Tony whistled. "Look's pretty good so far." He said.

Reaching down I trailed my fingers over the top of my leg dragging the edge of my skirt furth uncovering the smooth creamy skin of my thighs.
There was a tingle in my belly as they stared at my naked legs.
"Get that shot," Tony said, "I can just see a little bit of her panties."

"If you want to see them, move this out of the way for me." I said flicking my skirt.

Tony reached down with a shaky hand, pinched the edge of my skirt very carefully in his fing a little higher, exposing the crotch of my panties.

I was a little wet and wondered if the material was showing a damp spot.

Dave took another two pictures.

Turning over onto my front I stretched out both legs, the material of my skirt bunching up aln waist again partially exposing my panties.
"Take one now Dave, she's got a great ass," Pete said.
"Don't you want to fix my skirt first?" I asked.

Dave was right there this time,
"You're right, we should move it a little bit," slowly he raised the hem of my skirt right up to th my back until the whole of my panty covered ass was exposed.

"What do you guys think? Is it nice?" I said.

"Sweet," Tony said, "Id love to see it bare."

The other two agreed,

"It looked awesome when you were over the road but even better up close." Pete Said.

My panties were high cut so easing my hips up off the bed slightly I managed to reach back the elastic at the bottom of my butt cheek, pulling it up into the crack of my ass, exposing on repeating the process the other side so that for all intents and purposes, my ass was comple them.

Dave once again walked around the bed firing shots off from different angles.

Tony whistled softly, "Man those cheeks look so soft."

Turned on by their attention and aching to be touched I decided to give them a treat.

"Each of you can run your fingers over my ass and feel how soft it is, if you want to."

Tony was first, letting his fingers linger over the soft flesh, his touch warm.

Pete followed, touching so softly it tickled, Dave's touch was firm he circled his fingers over made me shudder as he ran a finger along the crack.

Deciding that was enough for now I rolled over onto my back.

My skirt had flopped down again and Tony said,

"I'd give anything to see your panties pulled up like that from the front."

"Whoa that would be too much," Dave said. "Am I right?"

In answer I undid another button on my blouse so now most of my bra and the smooth skin exposed. "Turn around for a second."

They did as they were told and I quickly re-arranged my panties pulling the material in towar

"Yeah, I know," I replied, making them laugh.

"Unbelievable," Tony said, "Your thighs are really nice I want to touch them so bad."

"Keep wishing mister," I said, making them laugh again.

Dave took several pictures, this time even kneeling down and pointing the camera between

"Bloody hell," said Dave, "Don't spoil things with your stupid questions."

"Relax guys" I said, "sometimes, sometimes not, I guess I can show you a little bit."

I paused, "if you want?" They all agreed that they would.

Once again instructing them to turn around I eased my panties down uncovering the narrow

"Does this answer your question boys?"

They turned around and Tony almost choked. "Oh my god that is so nice."

Dave once again lifted the camera, Pete stood close to the edge of the bed.

"Wow that little strip looks so neat and soft."

Totally in control and feeling very horny I said,

"I will let you stroke it if you like, but only the little strip and just for a minute."

"If your fingers stray anywhere else I go home, agreed?"

Dave put down his camera, again his touch was firm, he ran the tip of his finger along the th

He reached out and unzipped my skirt, pulled it over my hips and let it drop to my feet.

"Who wants to help me out of this blouse?"

Pete stepped forward before Tony could make a move, slowly popping the buttons, the back

As I flopped down and settled back on the bed the guys were in awe, speechless and by the jeans, very hard.

"Would you like to see a little bit more?" I asked...stupid question.

Of course they all agreed.

My heart was pounding; walking in front of open blinds to tease them was one thing but I wa strip naked with the guy's just inches away from my pussy.

"Move down to the foot of the bed for me" they did as I asked.

Taking a deep breath to calm my racing pulse I said.

"You have been great so far so I guess I could show you just a little peak of pussy."

There was utter silence as I spread my legs apart, keeping them flat on the bed, running my my belly and rubbing the palm of my hand against my mound I hooked a finger into the leg c eased them over just a bit so that one side my pussy peeked out.

"Look at that, it's so smooth," said Pete,

"What are you waiting for Dave, take a picture."

I felt the mattress sink slightly as Dave steadied himself at the end of the bed.

"Are you wet?" asked Tony.

"What does it look like?" I said, pulling the flimsy material away from my damp lips and over that all of my pussy was now exposed to them.

"Yeah," Tony agreed. "It's wet alright."

I reached down between my legs and very briefly spread my outer lips before pulling my kni covering myself up.

"Holy shit look at those lips," Pete said "Did you see how pink it was?"

Getting off the bed I motioned to Tony to come to me, pointing at the other two in turn I said, my skirt and he took off my blouse so it seems like you missed out." Leaning in close I breat "I want you to strip me naked."

Hesitating at first Tony stood behind me and unclasped my bra, slipping it down my arms an breasts, there was an appreciative whistle from the guys.

Placing the bra with my other clothes he paused for a second then knelt in front of me hooki fingers in the waistband of my panties, pulled them away from my belly then over my hips ar them down.

The wet crotch stuck to my pussy lips, briefly tugging on them as Tony eased the material a face was just inches from my vagina, he breathed in deep taking in the musky aroma and hi my dampness as he exhaled.

Taking his time he slipped my panties down, past my knees and to my ankles where I stepp

He stood holding the damp material like a trophy.

Naked before them, I kneaded my breasts pinching the erect nipples.

Parting my legs I slid my hands down my body and between my legs placing one foot on the up, again using two fingers to spread my outer lips apart.

Slipping my heels off, I crawled onto the mattress.

"Come here," I said and they gathered round.

Looking down at the bulges rising from their crotches I said,

"You all look like you're about to cum in your pants, it seems we all need a bit of relief but I'm touching you and you're not touching me, what I would like to do though is a bit of mutual ma

Tony spoke up, "How do you mean exactly?"

I smiled at him,

"It's simple, I put on a bit of a show and you get to watch as I stroke my pussy, then you sho it got you."
Dave gave his cock a quick little squeeze through his jeans as he tried to adjust it to a more position, flushing a bit when he realised I had seen him.

"Go ahead, you can do whatever you've got to do, but I don't think it's fair for me to lie here w everything on display while you stay fully clothed, I would really like to see those hard cocks

They looked at one another, perhaps a bit shy about undressing.

"I'm giving you permission to drop your pants and cover me with your cum butthere's no nee if you don't want" I said.
Pete smiled and quickly unzipped his jeans, seeing this Dave pulled his straight down while his belt and zip, his jeans pooling round his ankles as he pulled out a cock that was swollen pre-cum.
In fact they all looked like they were about to explode.

The guys watched fascinated as I settled back on the bed with my legs open, one knee turn fingers down onto my wet pussy rubbing them back and forth over the slick lips. It looked lik holding their breath as I worked my fingers through the damp folds, watching transfixed as I each of them absentmindedly stroking a hand up and down the length of their cock.

Rubbing a finger in little circles over the sensitive nub of my clitoris, I gasped and wiggled m

Letting a finger rest on my swollen clit I slipped my right index finger between my lips, into th

The sight of them, working towards climax, made me shiver.

My pussy was hyper sensitive and I needed to cum, rubbing my fingers over my sopping lips

I couldn't move for a few seconds, catching my breath as I came down from the high.

I flopped back down, one hand resting on my pussy as I idly ran my fingers through the dam

It was evident that they would not last much longer.

Tony was still casually rubbing his hand over his cock seemingly in no rush to cum, dreamily wetness between my legs from my own orgasm.

Almost in a whisper he said, "Look at that pussy juice I would love to lick that up."

Without thinking I answered, "Why don't you then."

He looked at me a little shocked and to be truthful I was as shocked by my response.

"Just your mouth though, no fingers or touching Ok?"

Nodding in agreement he knelt at the foot of the bed as I worked my way to the edge to mak

He took in the sight for a moment then very slowly ran his tongue up over the smooth skin o orgasm.

He finished licking along my thighs and raised his head.

"That was awesome thank you."

Before he could move I lifted my hand from my pussy.

"But you're not finished yet."

I could see the excitement in his eyes, "You want me to do it there?" He asked.

In answer I placed my heels on the bed, opening myself up to him.

Lightly brushing his tongue over my inner thigh he worked his way up to my pussy, I jumped

I looked down at the mess between my legs.

"One of you had better get me a towel." I said.

They waited as I cleaned myself up and dressed in the bathroom, I joined them in the kitche over the photos, with Dave promising to let me have a copy.

Picking up the picture I was going to have framed I handed Tony my damp panties, "Here a afternoon fun."

I said my goodbyes and quickly walked home, showering when I got there, the faint musky s briefly as the hot water ran down my body before the shower gel washed it away.

Two days later I came home to find a small envelope on the door mat, good to his word Dav with the photos of our afternoon and I could hardly wait for Steve to get home so that I could him.
